Famous B.C. Medico Tarred and Feathered by John Oliver's Son

Dr. V. E. Latimer Outrage Victim; Charge Is Laid

Son of Late Hon. John Oliver Released on Bail—Makes Counter Charges Concerning Prominent Specialist

Canadian Press

PENTICTON, B.C., Nov. 28—Dripping tar, and the lower portion of his body covered with feathers, Doctor V. E. Latimer, formerly of Brandon, Man., well known in western Canada as an eye, ear and nose specialist, and a man well up in years, staggered into town late at night, and notifying the police, charged Charles E. Oliver, son of the late Hon. John Oliver, former premier of British Columbia, with causing grievous bodily harm. Mr. Oliver was arrested and immediately released on bail.

The tar and feather episode follows a long series of charges made against Dr. Latimer by Mr. Oliver.

Joseph Oliver, Vancouver lawyer, and brother of the accused man, appeared before the Penticton police commission recently, and also made charges. He requested that some action be taken by the police commission. He was advised the commission were powerless to act. The nature of the charges has not been made public.

CALLED BY PHONE THEN ATTACKED

Dr. Latimer stated to the police he was called to the telephone at his home by a man who gave the name of Harvey. This man stated he wished to see the doctor in his office, and said he would be at the office at 7:15 o'clock.

Dr. Latimer drove down to his office and seeing a man in the street outside, asked him if he was Harvey. The answer, the doctor states, he received, was a right swing to the jaw, which knocked him to the sidewalk.

Two other men, he said, who apparently had been loitering in the darkness, jumped on the doctor, and assisted by the man who hit him on the jaw, threw him into a motor car standing at the curb.

The car was driven away at a furious pace. Constable Allercott on patrol duty, spotted the car, and as it whizzed past him, fired a shot at the rear right tire. The shot apparently did not take effect, according to constable's statement.

Is Undressed

Dr. Latimer states that on the car reaching a point about two miles and a half from the centre of the city, and in a lonely vacant lot, the three men took him out of the car. His feet were tied with a thong. His trousers and underwear were removed. A large pail of tar-like mix e, a slimy stick with road substance, was at the scene. In this one of the men dipped a stable brush. The tar was applied to the doctor's legs. A pillow slip full of feathers was slit open. The feathers

MISS KLINGER, 18, fond of flying, and Mr. Babcock of Mineola, Long Island, were married in the air, far up, the plane going 100 miles an hour. When the wedding was over the bride, groom and best man all jumped out of the airplane with parachutes, landing safely.

Interesting, but too much excitement, perhaps, for one day. In the old days the bride found sufficient excitement in a handful of rice and a shoe tied to the back of a carriage. However, it is better to begin marriage with a jump in a parachute for excitement rather than end it with a jump to Reno or Paris for a divorce.

FIND KLUXER GROUP WITHIN PRISON WALLS

New Angle in Investigation of Mutiny at Colorado Penitentiary

Associated Press

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 28.—Disclosure of the existence of an organized Ku Klux Klan group within the walls of Colorado's penitentiary, with both guard and convict members, presented a new angle today in the investigation of the mutiny at the penitentiary October 3, in which 13 lives were lost.

The revelation was made by Thomas K. Tynan, for 16 years warden of the prison, in testimony before Governor William H. Adams' special commission investigating the riot. He testified that plotting of the Klan against the prison administration had caused a collapse of discipline.

Lack of proper discipline, traceable to this organization, was responsible for the outbreak of last month, during which a handful of convicts barricaded in a cell house held the entire law enforcement machinery of the state at bay for more than 18 hours, the former warden asserted.

Tynan charged that a former governor negotiated with Klan officials in an effort to oust Tynan as warden. He timed that attempt during the administration of Governor William E. Sweet. In his testimony, however, he did not mention Sweet's name.

After making his charges of Klan machinations, Tynan urged the commission to recommend changes in the administration of the penitentiary.

Support Proper Plebiscite Bill

Canadian Press

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 28.—Liberal members of the Nova Scotia house of assembly have agreed to support a proper plebiscite bill and to expedite its passing early in the forthcoming session of the house, Hon. William Chisholm, leader of the opposition, announced last night. The party leader said that on the introduction of a measure drafted "in accordance with the will of the people, as expressed in the plebiscite," members of the opposition would give it their support regardless of personal feeling on the question.

TINY TOWN ON WILLINGDON LINE BURNED

Property Damage Between $20,000 and $25,000, as Hairy Hill Destroyed

Still another Alberta town was added to the long list of towns wiped out by fire in northern Alberta this year, when Hairy Hill, on the new Willingdon line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, about 26 miles due north of Vegreville, was swept by an early morning blaze Thursday and property damage estimated between $20,000 and $25,000 done.

The fire started in the post office building shortly after 3:30 a.m. and spread rapidly to the adjourning building. Townspeople rushed from their homes in their night attire fearing that the flames would sweep the entire village. Good work on the part of a volunteer bucket brigade confined the fire to the post office building, John Deere implement shed and a building which is used as a dance hall.

These three buildings were completely destroyed along with $15,000 worth of farm machinery stored in the implement shed. The telephone exchange, which was housed in the post office building, was also destroyed and communication with the outside was interrupted until Thursday afternoon, when first word of the fire reached the city.

The dance hall was owned by Sam Lisogar, who is also post master at Hairy Hill. The John Deere building was owned by J. J. Stanton of Vegreville. J. Sydar is the agent in the town.

Bootlegging By Aeroplane Gets Severe Setback

WINDSOR, Oct., Nov. 28.—Aeroplane rum running activities which have become increasingly prevalent received a check Tuesday. Canadian police authorities raided border liquor bases on Lake Erie and Lake St. Clair, thousands of dollars worth of export liquor was seized, and almost simultaneously United States immigration officers captured two aeroplanes near Detroit. The pilots of both planes escaped, but one man, Edgar C. MacDonald of Dearborn, who was near one of the planes when it landed was arrested. Beside the plane, the immigration inspectors found 12 cases of Canadian whiskey, with Vancouver, B.C., labels.

Four other planes have been seized by customs and immigration inspectors during the last three months.

Ontario provincial police raided docks at Sarnia, Courtright, Port Lambton and Ericau.

PIED PIPER CARRIED HIS SECRET TO GRAVE

HOUSTON, Nov. 28—The secret of exterminating rats by the hundreds has been carried to the grave by the Pied Piper of Houston.

Andrew Schroeder, fifty-four, who at the time of his death was employed as the official rat killer of Houston, won world-wide recognition a few years ago when he exterminated thousands of rats during the New Orleans bubonic plague scare.

Schroeder had a special method by which the rats were driven from the buildings into the street to die, and he never told the secret of his art.

DIRTY NECKS MAY ROB STUDENTS OF DIPLOMAS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—Dirty necks may prevent high school students here from graduating.

The rules committee of the board of education, it was reported today, is considering the following offenses as warranting refusal to issue a diploma:

Immoral conduct; indecent language; violent opposition to authority; persistent disobedience or disorder; dishonesty or untruthfulness; habitual tardiness; unauthorized absence; uncleanly condition of person or clothing.

CLERGY REFUSE TO BURY FRAUD

DIAR BEKER, Turkish Kurdistan, Nov. 28—Aman Sahib, a man who pretended he had wealth and promised to bequeath it to several people if they took good care of him in his old age, left a will leaving $10,000 each to six persons who had been kind to him. After his death it was found that his earthly wealth amounted to no more than $10. The Moslem clergy refuse to bury him.

Open St. Lawrence Channel Without Aid Ice-breakers

Canadian Press

MONTREAL, Nov. 28. — Providing he is supplied with the necessary funds, which would be $150,000 less than that required to operate government ice-breakers, Dr. T. Howard Barnes, ice engineering expert of McGill University, announced today he would guarantee an open channel from Montreal to Quebec by April 1 each year, without the aid of ice-breakers.

In an address to a local service club, Dr. Barnes said the loss to Montreal through the closing of the river each winter was estimated at $15,000,000. If the waters, at various sections of the river, were confined to one deep body of water which would have a temperature always above freezing point, Dr. Barnes said he could guarantee an open channel between Montreal and Quebec by April each year. The system would be effected through the aid of rock filled crib works. The water coming from Lake Ontario is always above freezing temperature. It now flows down the shallow parts of the river containing cold water, which results in heavy ice formations, which, under his system, would be eliminated.

FLIERS MAY LEAVE NORTH POST TODAY

Evacuation of Reliance by MacAlpine Party is Expected

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28—Evacuation of Fort Reliance, far north outpost on the shores of McLeod Bay, may be undertaken today by the MacAlpine party. Their long wait of more than two weeks for the "freeze-up" so that they could land their heavy ski-runnered planes on the ice during the aerial journey to civilization, was ended last night, when Pilot William Sutton, Dominion Explorers' pilot, brought them word that the Barrens-bound lakes are ready for winter flying.

Sutton took off yesterday morning from Stoney Rapids and cut straight across the barrens on his 300-mile jaunt to Reliance. With no radio station at the latter place, officials here have not heard from him since that time, but they are confident he will have delivered his message to Captain G. S. Blanchet, commander of the four-plane patrol bringing out the MacAlpine men.

A start from Reliance may be made today, though it is probable the party will not leave until tomorrow. And their destination may be either Fort Resolution, 200 miles south, or Stoney Rapids. The latter would be in the nature of a "short cut" from the original plans, but it is possible Capt. Blanchet may decide on the single hop to Stoney Rapids rather than take two days to make a stop-over at Resolution.

In either case, word will be flashed here as soon as the fliers arrive.

Big Lumber Ship Must Be Raised

Calgary Man Dies In Witness Box

Canadian Press

CALGARY, Nov. 28.—James Hogan, of Calgary, dropped dead in the city police station Thursday morning directly after being called to the witness box to give evidence against two men charged with theft.

Just as Hogan stepped into the box and had taken the oath, blood began to spurt from his mouth from an internal hemorrhage. He was quickly helped from the court by Detective Dorrian, but had got no further than the outside hall of the court room than he dropped down dead. Hogan was the resident of a little rooming house on Centre street. He had been in ill health for some time.

MARLAND WELL BLOWS IN BIG FLOW OF GAS

Burns $75,000 Worth of Equipment — Proves Southern Field

Blowing in with 20,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily, Marland well, early this morning proved up the whole of the Southern Turner Valley field.

The strike came as a surprise to drillers who were in the Dalhousie sands and the wet gas, gushing up with terrific force took fire, completely destroying the derrick and other equipment, causing a loss of $75,000, all insured. A head has been put on the well and it is hoped to have the flames under control within a couple of days.

The Marland well is situated four miles south of Home No. 1 and is of great importance in that it is the first well in the district to strike gas or oil while still in the Dalhousie sands. Instant reaction was noticed in markets at Calgary and Edmonton and all issues closed slightly up on the day's trading.

10 Years And Lash For Winnipeg Man

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28.—A sentence of ten years in the penitentiary and 10 lashes was meted out to Charles Galsky, Winnipeg, by Mr. Justice Donovan in assize court today. Galsky was given the long prison term and punishment after being convicted of rape. Also convicted on more than a dozen charges of obtaining money by false pretences, Galsky received a prison term of five years on each count, the sentences to run concurrently.

Arthur Toole, convicted of selling narcotics, was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary.

Treachery Of Cracking Ice Snatches Life

BY GILLIS PURCELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

THE PAS, Man., Nov. 28.—Ten lives is the toll paid this year by northern Manitoba to the treachery of the freeze-up. All but the largest lakes are layered with ice, enabling trappers, fishermen and prospectors again to travel safely to and from their camps. Again the north-men are moving over the frozen water routes, but with thoughts of ten fatal mid-November days when cracking ice and snow-laden winds snatched life with fierce abandon.

ADD TREACHERY OF...

Beginning Trek

Prospectors who paddled their canoes down Lake Athapapuskow to Cranberry Portage, fifty miles north of The Pas, before winter set in, are beginning to trek back to their claims. Some have been held up for three weeks by the weather they call the "freeze-up" and Northern aviators term the "in-between season" and some northerners who put away their canoes for the winter at their mining claims are walking in over the ice to the nearest railway.

Every fall, the elements make fatal claim on the pioneering residents of new Manitoba. This year, they numbered man and woman, young and old, on their death list.

Seven of the ten fatalities recorded with the advance of winter were fishermen who died on November 20. Lake Athapapuskow and Cormorant Lake each marked up a double tragedy that day, but frailties of communication prevented knowledge of the deaths until days later, while Lake Winnipeg took three lives.

When an ice floe fell to pieces on Cormorant, O. Goodman and H. Davidson went to death in the icy waters. Fred Obach and Mannie Magnusson wandered on the blizzard raked ice surface of Lake Winnipeg until they fell exhausted and were frozen to death. Their companion, Jacob Schlidt, died from effects of the exposure yesterday. Arthur Anderson, with Jack Currie, crashed through thin ice on Athapapuskow en route to start winter fishing operations. These two lads from Cranberry Portage were harnessed to a provision-laden sled when it forced its way through the ice, and they were dragged beneath the surface.

TURNOVER OF WHEAT POOL MUCH LOWER

Handled 288,796,642 Bushels of Wheat and Coarse Grains

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28. — Total handling of 288,796,642 bushels of grain, divided into 253,102,585 bushels of wheat and 35,694,057 bushels of coarse grains is reported by the Canadian wheat pool in the annual report of the board of directors, issued here Wednesday night.

The gross turn over for the year amounted to $288,097,071, a reduction from the previous year of $35,000,000 largely accounted for in the carry over of wheat which on August 31, 1929, amounted to 48,358,585 bushels.

Sales Regular

Sales of wheat over the marketing period under review—1928-29—the report states have been remarkably regular in view of the extreme conditions of the world's markets, which had to be contended with. The carry over was a result of the super-abundance of supplies which could not be placed into consumptive channels without demoralizing the world markets.

Deliveries to country elevators or over platforms in the western inspection division during the year ending July 31 last were 475,711,628 bushels of wheat of which 244,248,300 bushels were delivered to the Pool or 51.3 per cent of the total crop.

Export Trade

Dealing with the export trade, the report shows that the Canadian pool shipped to 90 ports in 19 countries, a total of 108,140,608 bushels, the largest shipments being to the United Kingdom, 34,664,851 bushels.

No announcement of the final payment has yet been made, the report

ENGLISH PEER MARRIES ALIX, ALBERTA, GIRL

Miss Pearl Sundberg is Quietly Married at Coast to Lord Cheylesmore

To the names of Lord Rodney and Lord Montagu, English peers who have married and settled down in Alberta permanently, is now added that of Lord Cheylesmore, who farms a couple of sections of land in the Alix district. His bride was Miss Pearl Margaret Sundberg, daughter of a neighbor of Lord Cheylesmore, and the marriage took place in Vancouver two months ago. While no effort has been made to keep the affair secret, publicity has been discreetly avoided, and the newly-weds have been able to enjoy life on their Alberta farm ever since.

They are at present in Calgary en route to Cuba, where they will remain for the racing season. Lord Cheylesmore is a prominent breeder of bloodstock, and keeps two or three brood mares and a useful string of racers. He will not, however, be recognized by racecourse fans as Lord Cheylesmore, as he lives here under his family name of Captain Eaton, and races his horses under that name.

The new Lady Cheylesmore, daughter of A. J. Sundberg, of Alix, is a splendid type of Scandinavian womanhood and has led a typically Canadian life. She is a fully trained nurse and followed her profession in Vancouver. She was there this summer when Lord Cheylesmore, together with a friend from Edmonton, was returning from a trip to California, and it was at the coast they married. The decision was reached quickly, and it is understood that while there was no formal engagement, an "understanding" has existed between Lord Cheylesmore and his bride for some few years past.

Lord Cheylesmore will continue to keep his residence in Alberta, farming his land, breeding and racing his horses and making annual winter trips to the South American tracks. He has lived in Alberta for the past nine years.

Keyhole Is Evidence In Divorce Case

Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 28.—One of the most curious exhibits ever seen in an English court room was produced today when a keyhole was introduced in evidence in a divorce case so that the jury might judge how much could be seen by peeping through it.

The keyhole was completely surrounded by a drawing room door and Justice Hill allowed the whole door to be placed in as evidence upon the plea of counsel that there was a question of observations having been made through the keyhole and that the jury might like to test its possibilities for themselves.

Want Commission Appointed To Deal With Immigration

By M. McINTYRE HOOD
Canadian Press Staff Correspondent

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 28.—A strong recommendation that the dominion government appoint a special commission to deal with the entire question of immigration and resolutions asking for the improving of drastic restrictions on immigration with more rigid selection of settlers, were passed at this morning's session of the annual convention of the Canadian Legion. These recommendations and resolutions were the result of the deliberations of a special committee which made an exhaustive study of the situation. The committee heard many witnesses in the three days of its sessions and made a study of a report prepared by a commission of the Saskatchewan command of the legion, dealing principally with conditions in the western provinces.

The convention also passed a strong resolution objecting to proposed immigration to Canada of any Mennonite or other refugees from Russia both from a national and an empire standpoint and more particularly on account of the present unemployment conditions in Canada.

Ramsay MacDonald Thinks Unemployment Conquered

TAKING HAND IN ELECTION AT TAMWORTH

Titled Opponent of Labor Wants Industries Safeguarded

Associated Press Cable

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Premier Ramsay MacDonald, in a message to George Horwill, Labor candidate in the by-election in the Tamworth division, expresses the conviction the government efforts to relieve unemployment will be successful.

"I understand that your opponent is trying to deprecate the efforts we are making to stimulate trade both by increasing the efficiency of industry and by encouraging and helping useful schemes that will provide work," Mr. MacDonald wrote. "We are trying to tackle the unemployment problem at its roots. But no one knows better than he and his colleagues how deeply and firmly established these roots have been allowed to become during the last few years. The electors will not have forgotten that our predecessors had nearly five years of power with a large majority. We have already given evidence that we are approaching the problem of unemployment in a very different spirit and given anything approaching the same opportunity we shall, I think, have very different results to show."

Meanwhile Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, minister of Labor in the last Conservative government and Conservative candidate in the by-election is continuing his campaign in which he is pressing for a policy of safeguarding of industries.

The by-election was necessitated through the resignation of the Conservative member Sir Edward Iliffe. Polling takes place December 2.

were scattered on the specialist.

The three men got into the car and drove off at the same rate of speed at which they approached.

Dr. Latimer, left minus his trousers, and covered with the tar and feathers, was forced to walk the two and a half miles back to the city, with only his overcoat to cover him.

Police, after being notified, were able to find the scene of the tar and feather episode by the trail of tar left on the sidewalks by the doctor during his walk to town.

Reaching his house, Dr. Latimer communicated with the police, and also summoned Dr. R. B. White. The physician found Dr. Latimer suffering from a badly swollen jaw, and from shock. He ordered him to bed.

Recognized Voice

When Dr Latimer filed the grievous bodily harm charge against Mr. Oliver he told the police he had recognized the voice of Mr. Oliver, and for this reason was sure he was one of the trio who had kidnapped him.

Appearing before Magistrate G. F. Guernsey, Mr. Oliver did not plead to the charge. Bail in the sum of $500 cash and a surety for a similar amount was set and promptly put up. The preliminary hearing was set for Monday.

About three weeks ago red paint and blood were spattered on Dr. Latimer's sign outside his office, and inscribed in blood on the sign were the words: "Abandon hope, all ye who enter here."

This episode was mentioned in the local press at the time, but it was considered the work of some practical joker.

"RED" TROOPS TO EVACUATE CHINA FRONTS

Withdrawal of All Soviet Forces From China is Confirmed

Associated Press

TOKYO, Nov. 28. — The withdrawal of all soviet troops from Chinese territory appeared confirmed here today by scattered reports reaching Harbin and relayed by Japanese correspondents.

TOKYO, Nov. 28.—It was learned here today that a proposal by the United States, suggesting some form of joint action looking toward a peaceable settlement of the Chinese - Russian situation in Manchuria had been prseented to the Japanese government. The governments of Great Britain, Italy and France were believed to be included in the suggestion.

Manchuria invaded on both west and east by Soviet armies which in the last few days scattered the Chinese troops in wild retreat, yielded Wednesday night and agreed to the Russian government's demand that expelled Soviet officials be reinstated as managers of the Chinese eastern railway as a precedent to negotiations for peaceable settlement of the railway dispute.

For many days there had been rumors that Chang Hsuen-Liang, governor of Manchuria, disheartened by the Russian troops' success in dispersing his soldiers and despairing of receiving aid from the Nationalist government of China, had sued independently for peace with Russia. Controversy over the Chinese eastern railway, controlled jointly by Russia and China, until last July, resulted in armed conflict.

Only Wednesday the Nationalist government of China, aroused by the seriousness of the Chinese position in Manchuria, had made formal contact with the league of nations to discuss the procedure proper in case China should decide to ask for the intervention of the league in checking a Russian invasion.

Notwithstanding negotiations undertaken with the Soviet authorities by the provincial government, it was regarded as very likely that the Nanking administration would ignore the overture and press its appeal before the league.

A nine-year-old Indian lad named Duncan Young, who drowned 10 days ago in the Saskatchewan river at The Pas, was the first and the youngest of the "freeze-up" victims. He had attempted, with two young companions to cross the stream on new ice. A brave youngster saved two of the three, but Young's life was extinct when the body was recovered. To Mildred Rowe, 19-year-old daughter of the postmaster at Herb Lake, north of The Pas, came the most tragic fate. Carefree and gay, she started out on a six mile hike to her father's temporary camp at Broad Bay. Time and again the girl had made similar trips on foot through the surrounding bush country, but on this occasion, drizzling snow became a blizzard and she lost her way. Two days after she had waved a good-bye to the folks at Herb Lake, Mildred Rowe's frozen body was found nine miles from her home. She lay on her back with her hands clasped behind her head, as if resting from fatigue.

A resolution was adopted requesting the Quebec government to increase the bounty on wolves.

Labor Party Keeps Seat In Scotland

Canadian Press Cable

KILMARNOCK, Scotland, Nov. 28.—The labor party retained the Kilmarnock seat in parliament Wednesday when Craigie Atchison, K.C., was elected in a three-cornered contest in the bye-election necessitated by the death of B. Climie, labor man elected in the general elections. The vote today was: C. Atchison, Labor, 18,465; G. G. MacAndrew, Conservative, 13,270; Mrs. Isobel Brown, Communist, 1,448.

In the general elections the Labor man had a majority of 7,000 over MacAndrew, with a Liberal candidate 3,000 votes further back, so Wednesday's voting indicated improvement in the Conservative vote.

The seat had been won from the Conservatives by Labor in the general elections of May 30.

CAN. LEGION TO JOIN IN PEACE MOVE

Canadian Ex-servicemen Ready to Aid Any Movement

By M. McINTYRE HOOD,
Canadian Press Staff Correspondent

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 28.—An enunciation of the strong determination of the ex-service men of Canada to join in any international movement for world peace was expressed in a resolution passed at this morning's session of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League. Brigadier-General Alex Ross, of Saskatchewan, in introducing the resolution, reiterated the strong views which had been expressed at previous conventions of the legion in this connection, saying that the legion stood ready to co-operate with any body working towards this much desired end.

The serious nature of the unemployment situation in many parts of Canada was given serious discussion by the convention, particularly with reference to the position of ex-service men suffering from disabilities. In the discussion of this question on the convention floor it was agreed that no satisfactory solution of the problem was at present in sight. In an effort to arrive at a suggested solution the convention passed a resolution requesting the dominion executive council to appoint a special committee to survey the situation and make definite recomemndations tending to the solution of the problem.

The convention, after three years of discussion and consideration, finally adopted a resolution approving of the form of jewel to be presented to past-presidents, honorary secretaries and honorary treasurers.

NAVAL BASE OPERATIONS QUESTIONED

Discussion in Commons on Slowing Down of Work at Singapore

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Questions relating to the slowing down of operations on the Singapore naval base flew thick and fast in the House of Commons Wednesday. Postponement of work was confined to the naval base alone, Premier MacDonald stated, and there had been no change of policy with respect to the air base.

Right Hon. A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, replying to Brigadier Clifton Brown, said no orders for materials had been cancelled owing to the slowing down of work. Suspensions of various parts of the construction program would eventually result in certain orders not being placed. At present a good deal of the work that was being done was work that would have been done in any case.

Then there was also the question of contributions from the Federated Malay States, New Zealand, and the Straits Settlement to the government for the construction program.

W. L. Everard (Conservative), Leicester, asked if it were not perfectly clear grants from these countries had been made on the express understanding the contract would be completed.

"Is not the government getting money under false pretences?" he asked.

Mr. Alexander said the money so far received had been taken by the government's predecessors.

Says Railways Hit By Wheat Situation

Canadian Press

TRURO, N.S., Nov. 28.—S. J. Hungerford, vice president of the Canadian National railways, who was here on a tour of inspection, Wednesday, said that "the wheat situation this fall will seriously affect the earnings of railways in Canada." The movement of wheat this year does not exceed 25 per cent of the movement to this time last year, Mr. Hungerford said, adding that the future of the situation was problematical.

Because elevator space throughout the west and at the head of the great lakes is well filled with storage wheat, Mr. Hungerford did not think there would be any considerable shipments for some time. A feature of the 1929 grain transportation, he said, was the movement west via Vancouver. Fully 20 per cent more wheat has left the country by that route than for the corresponding period in 1928, thus decreasing the tonnage shipped via Atlantic ports of Portland, Me., Boston, Saint John, and Halifax.

Winnipeg Police Charged With Use Of "Third Degree"

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28.—Charges that several constables of the Winnipeg city police force had handled him brutally in the jailer's quarters following his refusal to leave the Rupert street station early Saturday morning were made in court Wednesday by Noel F. Olsen. Olsen appeared in court on a charge of disorderly conduct.

An inspector, two sergeants and several constables were named by Olsen as having twisted his arm, blackened his eye and choked him into insensibility when he went to the police station to his brother who had been arrested earlier in the evening.

Magistrate R. B. Graham refused to consider testimony of alleged violence to Olsen. This "would likely come up for consideartion at a political campaign meeting." He adjourned the case for a week.

Annual Observance Of Thanksgiving

Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Tranquility and in keeping with the suggestion of President Hoover's proclamation that the day be devoted to rest and an expression of gratitude for the plenty the year has brought, the national capital today entered into the annual observance of Thanksgiving.

The chief executive and Mrs Hoover, themselves, set an example for the nation to follow. Their programe included church services in the morning, an automobile ride in the afternoon and dinner in the evening with a few close friends as guests.

Many Washington officials had gone to their homes in various sections of the country for the holiday.

says in view of the large carry over on hand from last year.

This is the first year that there has been such a carry over. The only alternative was to have sold the crop at a price level that would have made the investment attractive to the speculator. Such an operation would, the report states have an effect on new crop price levels, which would be disastrous.

Perplexities

The year as a whole has been one of many perplexities and grave anxieties, says the report.

"The system upon which pool operations are based has, however, withstood every strain placed upon it so far and has never functioned with more efficiency than in the past year of surplus supplies."

Efforts for the establishment of an agency in Europe, and particularly in the United Kingdom, to stabilize a "fair price" level have not met with success. "As against some such arrangement, European governments have strained every nerve to increase home production, as is evidenced by the protective tariffs now ruling in important importing countries. France, Germany, and Italy all have increased tariffs since the pool commenced operation."

The coarse grains pools have shown a surprising development in the year under review. The deliveries from Manitoba and Saskatchewan — the two provinces in which they have operated—totalled 35,694,057 bushels. This includes oats, barley, flax and rye. Deliveries in Saskatchewan totalled 18,268,714; Manitoba, 15,837,945, and local purchases, 1,587,400.

A coarse grains pool will operate in Alberta during the present season and considerable expansion in distributing machinery is contemplated.

The quality for which Western Canada's wheat is famed was again present, but below average. The general average of this crop had 12.4 per cent. of protein as compared with 11.8 per cent. last year and a normal of 13.5 per cent. The chief disability the wheat suffered from was the aftermath of a disastrous frost which occurred on Aug. 22, 23 and 24, 1928, and which was accountable for most of the damage to grain.

It was apparent in the early season that there was a situation of extraordinary world production as both Canada and the United States produced large crops, to be followed later by Argentine with a record crop and Australia with an above-average crop.

Alberta Share

The Alberta Pool shipped to the Canadian Pool a total of 67,444,356 bushels, of which amount 18,919,574 went east and 48,524,782 were shipped west.

The most outstanding feature of the market's deliveries was the rate the grain was delivered at the primary market. This was in spite of the Pools' efforts to keep the grain back on the farm by paying storage. The use of the combine and truck, the increased efficiency of the railroads, combined with the small value of low grade wheats and a favorable season for the crop movement, created a market situation without precedent.

Total deliveries for the western inspection division for the year ending July 31 were 475,711,628 bushels, of which 244,248,200 were delivered to the Pool, or 51.3 per cent. of the total crop. The Pool was closed on July 15 and subsequent deliveries were received into the 1929-1930 Pool.

Much research work has been done and a modern laboratory has been equipped for the carrying on of research work in the qualities and relative values of the various wheats and their grades which are placed in the Pool's hands for marketing.

This provision has been made in order that sales managers will be fully advised at as early a date as possible of the quality of the product they are handling.

In addition this laboratory will undertake to investigate the milling and baking qualities of all commonly grown and new varieties of wheat and study the suitability of each variety for various districts; investigate the quality of Pool cargoes exported from various ports relative to the quality of country run wheat; investigate the quality of wheat delivered in transit by domestic mills in relation to the premiums paid for same; study the possibilities of shipping cargoes of wheat of specified quality to customers; co-operate with other branches of the Pool in the furtherance of their crop improvement program.

PUBLISHERS OF U.S.A. TO ACT

Will Move Against Raise in Price of Newsprint

Canadian Press

MONTREAL, Nov. 28. — What threatened to be a pulp and paper price war between the International Pulp and Paper Company, and the other Canadian newsprint interests has been averted. In an interview today A. R. Graustein, of New York, president of the International Company, said his company was ready to accede to the view of other companies and consent to an increase in the price of newsprint.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Should an increase become effective in the price of Canadian newsprint, such a step will immediately arouse members of the American newspaper publishers' association to action, according to E. H. Butler, president of the association.

In view of the activities of Canadian government officials and manufacturers, pending the substitution of an uneconomic control of production and price in place of the law of supply and demand, the board of directors of the American newspaper publishers' association has determined to call a special convention of all daily newspaper publishers to take steps for protection against artificial and arbitrary price fixing should an increase in the price of newsprint be announced," Mr. Butler said.

At the conclusion yesterday of a two-day joint session of the board of directors and paper committee, Mr. Butler announced that no conclusive information had been obtained as to whether or not the reported increase in the price of Canadian newsprint would go into effect.

POULTRY EXHIBIT

VANCOUVER, Nov. 28.—Representatives of the British Columbia Poultry Industry at a meeting here Wednesday, expressed their willingness to prepare an exhibit of 250 birds for the great poultry exhibition to be held in London, England, next July. The exhibit would represent this province's contribution to the Dominion government's proposed exhibit of one thousand birds.

GIANT PLANE CRASHES, TWO ESCAPE DEATH

Largest Airplane Built in U.S. Dives Into House in Small Hamlet

Associated Press

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N.Y., Nov. 28—Faltering and floundering like some pre-historic winged monster, wounded and about to die, the Fokker monoplane, F-32, largest airplane ever built in this country, crashed down into the tiny crossroads hamlet of Carle Place, adjoining Roosevelt Field, Wednesday.

When the ship finally came to a stop, with its nose buried deep in the upper floor of a two-story frame house, it had narrowly missed crashing full tilt into a hangar on the field, had snapped a telephone pole in two, ripped the chimneys and roofs off two dwellings and torn part of the roof off a third.

With the crash, the ship burst into flame and burning gasoline from its 800 gallon tanks sprayed in every direction.

The house on which it landed was destroyed by fire and the entire upper floor was burned off the home next door.

Two hours later firemen were unable to get within many feet of either building because of the scorching heat.

Miraculously neither of the two men aboard the Fokker was killed. The pilot, S. M. Botts, engineering inspector for the department of commerce, was catapulted out of the ship before the final crash. He landed unconscious in some shrubbery 500 feet away and was not found until ten minutes later. He is in hospital at Mineola, with deep cuts on his head, both ankles sprained and serious internal injuries.

Harry McDonald, a Fokker mechanic, was thrown clear before Botts was. He escaped with a sprained ankle and a few cuts on his face.

Two hours earlier James Pisani, 20, of Brooklyn, flying a small, light monoplane, crashed on top of a one-story real esate office in the heart of the business section of Westbury, a few miles from Carle Place.

A baby was sleeping on the second floor of the house next door to that which the F-32 hit. The mother heard the crash and rushed upstairs just in time to snatch the child out of its blazing crib.

Bruin Suffers From Insomnia Hunters Find

Canadian Press

SASKATOON, Nov. 28—N. O. Grosser, big game hunter, has discarded the old belief that during the winter the black bear retires to a den to sleep and to suck his paw. Grosser, with several companions, while on a hunting trip north of here, came to a bear den.

Blake Williams, one of the party, persuaded Grosser that the bear would be sound asleep and that Grosser might crawl in to the den and bring bruin out. All the members of the party laid down their guns and formed a human chain with Grosser as the grappling hook at the interesting end. Instead of a sleeping bear, they found a victim of insomnia, and Mr. Bruin dashed through the opening to his home, taking casual left and right hooks at the invaders. The bear, after carrying away the southern exposure of some hunting pants, was halted when Grosser recovered his rifle and killed the animal.

There are two kinds of people: Those who aren't hateful by nature, and those who speed up when somebody toots to pass.

Sailor Supposed Drowned, Turns Up

Canadian Press Cable

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A Maltese fireman named Attard, supposed to have been drowned when the steamer Molesay was wrecked with the loss of eight lives in a gale two days ago, created a sensation in a hotel at Milford Haven Wednesday by a sudden appearance. He had remained secluded aboard the wreck until calmer water permitted him to scramble to shore over the great Milford Rock, which rises steeply from the water. His feat was considered a remarkable one.

By chance a retired naval officer in a motor boat spotted Attard on the rock and took him off, stiff with cold and almost exhausted.

Six Mail Planes For Western Route

Canadian Press

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 27.—Purchase by Western Canada Airways, Limited, of six combined mail passenger planes for use on the Winnipeg-Banff air mail service was announced here today.

Three of the mail planes which are required for immediate delivery, will be built in Seattle, while the others will be built in Vancouver.

The type of plane selected by W. L. Brintnell, operations manager of Western Canada Airways in Winnipeg, has a cabin for four passengers and a mail capacity of 560 pounds. Planes of this type have been flown over the Seattle, Los Angeles and the Chicago-San Francisco air mail routes in the United States for the past two years.

40 FISHERMEN CONTINUE TRIP TO NTH. CAMP

Leave Isle A La Crosse, Carrying Stocks of Fresh Bannock

Canadian Press

ISLE A LA CROSSE, Sask., Nov. 28.—Carrying stocks of fresh bannock, baked during three days on which they found haven in this northern post, a party of more than 40 fishermen have continued their journey to Peter Pond lake, headquarters of the winter fishing industry.

The party was made up of fishermen, who struggled in across the lake on Sunday after they had been lost in the bush and gone without food for three days. Their presence in Isle a la Crosse threatened for a time to effect a serious food shortage here. Frank Scott, Winnipeg, one of the party, remained in hospital, suffering from lobar pneumonia, but his condition is very satisfactory.

Still showing the effects of their privations and suffering, the fishermen were prompted to try to proceed further, as there is a plentiful supply of food at the fishing camps.

Before leaving here they baked a large supply of bannock, which they expected would last until they completed the trip to the fishing camps, which usually takes two days' walking

The only communication with outside is via the government telegraph, and traders are anxiously awaiting the arrival of freight with the regular supplies. To date no word has been received that the freighters have left Big River for here. The temperature was lower today and the snow flurries have ceased.. It is, however, not cold enough to make ice. The thin ice covering some of the lakes and rivers is covered by six inches of snow. The fishing season will open officially on Monday, Dec. 2, but fishing will not be general unless the weather is very cold for the remainder of the week.

BUSINESS IN CANADA GOOD

This is Testimony From President of Imperial Bank

Canadian Press

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—Speaking generally, business has been active in Canada up to this time, said Peleg Howland, president of the Imperial Bank of Canada, in addressing shareholders at the 55th annual meeting Wednesday.

Building and contracting have been active, Mr. Howland said. Expenditure of a public nature on roads, schools and so forth has been large, railways have made and are continuing to make extensions and improvements. The production and export of pulp and newsprint has been large, and expenditure of those that have actually or seemingly profited by their ventures on the stock market has been free and has no doubt had an effect on the mode of living of those with whom they have come in contact, with resultant demand for luxuries.

Referring to the fact that the accumulation of notice deposits in Canada has not kept pace with the demand for money, and that in consequence the percentage of loans to deposits is in excess of what is desirable, Mr. Howland said "unquestionably the lure of speculation has diverted much of the savings of the public into hazardous ventures." He said it is believed recent events will tend to correct this.

Notwithstanding the speculative lure, Mr. Howland observed the sale of life insurance had increased, indicating a thrifty desire on the part of the public to provide for the future of its dependents.

you going to do to make up for that smash in Wall Street?"

W. C. Bulow, governor of South Dakota, replies that South Dakota is not particularly worried about what happens to Wall Street. He has observed that when things happen to South Dakota, Wall Street takes it calmly. He says that today, U. S. Thanksgiving Day, "South Dakotans will give thanks to Almighty God for the blessings they enjoy, and be especially thankful for the fact that they are not dependent for their bread and butter upon the wheat grown or cows milked in Wall Street." Governor Bulow, and all the rest of the United States are, however, to a great extent, dependent on Wall Street and what it does.

And the Dakotas might be glad some day to have money and engineers out of Wall Street show them how to use those hundreds of millions of tons of lignite now going to waste; that fuel turned to electric power and the electric power used in factories might be better for the Dakotas than raising wheat on land not fit for wheat.

Voyage Of Giant Liner Interrupted

Associated Press

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Because of a collision with a car float which made a hole in her bow, the trans-Atlantic voyage of the giant Cunarder Mauretania was interrupted today. From the quarantine station at the harbor entrance, she put back for her pier, ten miles away.

Representatives of the line expressed hope that repairs could be made quickly.

Captain G. McNeil, of the Mauretania, in a report to the marine police, said the float struck the liner on the port side, making a hole four feet wide and ten feet long just above the 36-foot draft line. He blamed the collision on the float which, he said, failed to give him the right of way.

The collision was at midnight.

THE NATIONAL FLAG

If Canada is to have a distinctive national flag, nobody surely will question that the men who have fought Canada's battles ought to have the deciding voice as to what the pattern of that flag should be.

That aside, the Canadian Legion recommends a design which must appeal strongly to those who are neither inclined to smother Canadian nationality nor to exaggerate this to the point of ignoring our relationship to the British Empire.

The Union Jack with the Canadian coat of arms superimposed upon it is a device which at the same time emphasizes Canada's status as a self-governing nation and symbolizes its membership in the great commonwealth of nations founded by people from the British Isles.

END THE FARCE?

According to the voters' list there are 40,739 qualified electors in Edmonton. Of these, 40,689 were not present at the annual meeting on Tuesday evening. The attendance at tonight's meeting on the south side will have to break recent records if it is large enough to blur the moral.

The annual town meeting has degenerated into a farce. As a means of informing the public it has long since ceased to be effective, and is now tending steadily toward the grand climax when there will be more speakers on the platform than hearers in the seats.

Next year's council should seriously consider putting an end to this silly annual performance. The public evidently depend now upon the newspapers, the radio and the campaign meetings for information regarding civic affairs. That being the case, the city might as well save the hall rent for these inconsequent official "gatherings," and the officials the time they spend preparing speeches to deliver to empty seats.

WAR IN MANCHURIA

Geneva is a long way from Manchuria, and so far as influence is concerned it is about as far from Moscow.

That the League of Nations can do anything immediately effective in response to China's plea for intervention between that country and Soviet Russia is not apparent. Moscow has resorted to force, as it plainly meant to do from the first. The League of Nations is not a fighting organization, and there is little enough prospect that the member-nations, under orders or influence of the League, would take up arms to oust the Reds from Manchuria.

A little more than a year ago, Nationalist China demanded that foreign troops and warships be withdrawn from Chinese soil and waters. They were withdrawn. Now Nationalist China is calling for help, and the only kind of help that could stay the carnage is not at hand.

At least the self-sufficient authorities at Canton or Nanking cannot blame Great Britain and the United States for the onslaught that the red army is making upon them, nor for not having forces on the scene with which to point a demand for a stay of hostilities.

MR. DUNNING'S APPOINTMENT

Hon. C. A. Dunning takes charge of the Dominion Department of Finance, as a relatively young man, with a record of very competent administration. The Minister of Finance ranks next to the Prime Minister in prestige, authority and influence, in the Government, in parliament, and in the country. Mr. Dunning's selection for the post is thus a promotion and a recognition of outstanding ability.

The new Minister has the disadvantage of following a predecessor who was peculiarly gifted, signally successful, and who to an unusual degree gained the confidence of men of all parties and sections. He has the compensating advantage of inheriting a fiscal policy which has been generally accepted as well adapted to the circumstances of the time—circumstances which in the main are about what they were four or five years ago.

Whether and to what extent the accession of Mr. Dunning implies a change in that policy, remains to be seen. It is at least unlikely that any radical alteration will be made at the coming session of parliament, or until the outcome is known of the free-for-all tariff fight at Washington.

The distinction that has thus come to a western minister is a recognition also of the growing political and economic importance of the western provinces. Unfortunately this almost certainly involves the transfer of the Railways department to a representative of the eastern half of the Dominion.

That the west will gain by this exchange of portfolios is doubtful.. A western minister of finance can scarcely be expected to influence the fiscal policy of the country to the same extent that a western minister of railways has influenced its railway policy.

The Poor Rich Man

By EDGAR A. GUEST

In a sunny place where men go to play
I met a millionaire one day,
His eye was sad and his voice was low
As he watched the workers come and go,
And I had to smile as I heard him sob,
"I wish to the Lord that I had a job!

"I have everything that a mortal needs,
A man to pull out my garden weeds,
A car to drive and food to eat—
With all I want is my life complete,
But I'm forced to idle the long days through,
And I wish to the Lord I'd a job to do!

"I used to dream of the joy I'd claim
When the time for quitting all labor came,
With the fortune made and the work all done,
But a tedious life is the life of fun,
And I'd happier be, let me say to you,
Could I wake up once more with a job to do.

"There's nothing that money buys or brings
That equals the thrill of doing things
To spend is nice, but I've lived to learn
I was happier far when I worked to earn.
With pride no longer my pulses throb,
I'm an idle man and I want a job!"

Religion

By GLENN FRANK

All of us who have lived past the cocksureness of our callow youth are seeking a satisfying insight into the meaning and ministry of religion to men in this modern age.

Glenn Frank

Is religion a city of refuge for the weak or a way of life for the strong?

Is religion born in a cry of weakness or in a shout of strength?

Do men turn to religion because they have lost their way in the universe, or is religion a sign that men have made themselves at home in the universe?

T. V. Smith, in his just-published Philosophic Way of Life, has some provocative things to say on these questions.

"All religions," he says, "began as a way whereby men sought to improve their lot.

"The way is in essence a short-cut to satisfaction.

"If men have to go the long way of discovering concrete means and adapting them to ends, they will never live long enough to achieve the ends felt necessary to prevent life's losing its deepest significance."

And so men, in gray despair, grab at gods to ease their lot, according to Mr. Smith.

"Gods grow up," he says, "as a guaranty that goodness will not remain wholly impotent in a world of hostile powers.

"Religion might survive the death of all the gods; but when men cease to believe in a short-cut, religion is no more. . . . There might be science or art or philosophy, but not religion.

"There remains over and above science and art and phiosophy the way of faith, the will to depend on a short-cut to success in the venture of life. This is religion."

In short, if this conception of religion is to be accepted, men can have no use for religion as long as they can fill their wants at other fountains.

Religion will play no role in health, if a good doctor is conveniently near at the end of a telephone.

Religion will play no role in the life of the workingman, if his trade union wins for him short hours, high wages, and sanitary surroundings.

God will no longer smile in a sunset or ride the thunderstorm, if the Weather Bureau issues readable predictive reports.

There is, indeed, some seeming ground for such contention, for, as Mr. Smith points out, "the natural history of religion in civilized times is a gradual surrender of province after province of its ancient realm." where "natural means" have come in to procure for men what they but blindly prayed for before.

But I doubt that the death of religion will come so surely in the wake of man's growing mastery of nature.

It is more likely, I think, that intelligent men will outgrow the older shabby habit of running to God as to a Santa Claus or an indulgent uncle, and will come to see religion as man's perfect emotional adjustment to his universe, an adjustment that will insensibly help him as his continuing conquest of his world.

From the files of The Edmonton Bulletin

On Tuesday the first fall of snow arrived since the storm in September. There is now from six to eight inches. The weather has not as yet been either cold or windy.

A couple of weeks ago Johnston Carscadden of Clover Bar ran across a large bear while cutting wood in the Beaver Hills. Having no means of defending himself, he left the bear, which showed fight, in possession of the locality. A day or so later he returned with a rifle and shot the old bear and a cub.

M. McLeod has finished threshing for the season. His machine threshed a total of 22,441 bushels, 5,709 of wheat, 11,235 of oats, and 5,397 of barley. Threshing was done for 60 farmers, giving an average crop of 374 bushels of grain to each farmer, 97 bushels of wheat, 187 of oats and 88 of barley.

The new mill at St. Albert, belonging to Hutton and Maloney, is nearing completion. Most of the machinery is in. There are two sets of stones and a double stand of rollers. The mill will turn out from 75 to 100 sacks of flour per day, part of it being roller process.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Diet Specialist and Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions on Health and Diet Answered by Dr. McCoy, when addressed in care of The Edmonton Bulletin

This harvest time of the year is not always the time for rejoicing. The farmer who has labored hard all year, hoping for favorable weather, is often disappointed when the time comes for the ripening of the harvest. So many times the winds have blown too hard, the hurricanes have come, the frosts have bitten the tender buds, or the spring rains have been so great as to destroy any possibility of a good fall crop.

Frank McCoy

The Viking farmers, who were the first settlers in New England, had their troubles in battling the elements, but their problems were no greater than that of the farmer of today. With all of our progress in a scientific way, we have so far accomplished very little in controlling the wind, the frost and the rain, so that every year in the same way the same soil will yield a plentiful harvest.

There are just about as many crops destroyed today as there were several centuries ago when the pilgrim fathers anxiously watched their crops and prayed for favorable weather.

The modern farmer has many advantages as far as improved implements are concerned, but he still has the same bad weather conditions to fight and the same fear of damage to the crops and possible complete loss of all his year's work.

The first Thanksgiving in America was celebrated because of an especially bountiful harvest, but there were many lean years after that when these sturdy pioneers of the frontier must have searched hard to find something to be thankful for at the official Thanksgiving time.

Our farmers are crying for relief from the uncertainties attending their hard work. As long as I can remember, most politicians have been talking about the subject of farm relief, but certainly very little has been done about it. When we speak of the farmer's hard luck and a bad year, we do so with a feeling of pity for the individual farmer, when we really should be concerned with the food supply, which concerns every man, woman and child in America.

A laborer receives his wages each week, the professional man usually has a steadily increasing income, but the farmer's yearly returns are very uncertain. The varying from pletniful to poor crops makes food prices uncertain.

Perhaps very little can be done to control the destroying effect of bad weather, but certainly a great deal can be done towards stabilizing prices through financing the farmer through the lean years and providing proper governmental storage facilities, so that the supply of food stuffs can be regulated to suit the steady demand. The farmer, alone, should not be made to bear the burden which comes from the destruction of crops by bad weather.

One season farmers in certain sections have poor corn crops. Another year in another part of the country the fruit may be entirely destroyed by the frost or insects. If these damages to certain sections could be blended with the results from poor crops in the rest of the country, the individual farmer would not have to suffer and, in fact, every individual would be benefited through a stability of food prices.

Let us hope that some adjustment can be made so that not too many Thanksgivings roll around before every farmer in America will have cause to be thankful when the end of the Harvest season comes—when he can feel that we are all helping him to stabilize his business of farming so that he will not have the feeling that his business is a gamble and that he is shaking dice with the elements.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question: Mrs. J. S. asks: "Will you please tell me if there is any difference between inflammatory rheumatism and what is called arterio-sclerosis, and what you would advise in the cure of both?"

Answer: There is no connection between inflammatory rheumatism and arterio-sclerosis, except that both are caused from a toxic condition of the body and both come mostly from extreme intestinal poisoning. The treatment I would advise takes up too much space to be put in the question and answer department, so pleace write again, fiving your full name and address, so I can send you special articles on both these disorders.

Question: A. W. asks: "Is it true that food which has been re-heated several times is injurious? Also, what is the correct way of breathing deep, vitalic, abdominal or lung? All dieticians I have heard speak on the subject have conflicting opinions."

Answer: Most foods may be re-heated many times without injury to the food value and, of course, this heating tends to preserve them and to avoid the development of poisonous bacteria. Most of your breathing in done through the action of the diaphragm, and the best kind of breathing exercises are those which will contract and relax the diaphragm to the fullest possible extent. There should be very little action to the abdomen or to the chest while taking this deep diaphragmatic breathing. Any physical culture teacher, or any singing instructor should be able to show you such breathing exercises.

MAYOR BURY EXPLAINS

Editor, Bulletin:

Sir—Re the police and auto licenses:

A report published in the issue of your paper of November 25, and which appears to reflect upon the Chief Constable, has been brought to my attention. In the opinion of the Commissioners, the head of departments should not intervene directly to protect themselves from charges so made, and any reply to such charges should come through the Commissioners. I have therefore taken up with the Chief Constable the allegations contained in the report and have his replies thereto.

Before setting them out, may I say that it would have been a good deal better if, instead of appealing even to the press, the "prominent Edmonton resident," whose name is not menmentioned, had brought the alleged facts directly to the attention of the Commissioners, when they would have been investigated at once. It would have been time enough surely when investigation was refused or neglected to have appealed elsewhere.

The first charge is that the Chief Constable was making no attempt to check up on auto drivers who had their licenses endorsed or cancelled. Upon this the Chief Constable reports that the charge is incorrect, as the traffic inspector has instructions to issue a circular memorandum giving a list of all automobile drivers whose licenses have been cancelled or suspended, and in the latter case showing the duration of the suspension. Copies of this memorandum are posted in all stations, and all members of the force instructed to see that the law in regard to the matter, as well as all the other laws, are enforced without fear or favor, and action taken against all persons whose licenses had

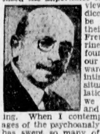
Keeping Mentally Fit

By Joseph Jastrow, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., LL.D.

Professor of Psychology, University of Wisconsin, 1888 to 1917; now professor emeritus; lecturer in the New School for Social Research, New York City; past president of the American Phychological Association

TINKERING WITH THE HUMAN SOUL

As one of the American psychologists who, in the early days, recognized the importance of Freud's novel views, my prejudice, if any, would be favorable. By their recent vogue, Freudian doctrines have profoundly changed our attitudes toward many of the intimate human situations and relations wherein we live and move and have our being. When I contemplate the ravages of the psychoanalytic wave which has swept so many off their feet, I feel the need of at least a sign of caution.



In the hands of a competent analyst, who, in addition to a technique, has an adequate sense of responsibility and a humane regard for human values (much harder to acquire than a set of principles and a vocabulary) the psychoanalytic procedure may be safe provided it is sane, and helpful if it happens to fit the case. Not all analysts have these qualifications by many removes, and the temptation is strong for them, and in another way for their patients, to dig things up by their roots, and disturb wantonly the underground retreat that nature has provided for her delicate nurtures.

Turning life into a clinis is as bad Turning life into a clinic is as bad mental hygiene as it is bad taste. Our reserves and reticences are sacred; finer human growth requires a protected privacy and a sheltered seclusion. The human plant, taking its pattern from those that nature grows in field and forest, should not have its roots ruthlessly exposed to the elements. It is true that at times a plant needs resetting in different soil; and since so many of us live artificial and even hothouse lives, the occasion may be frequent. It should always be done judiciously and responsibly. There has been altogether too much tinkering with human souls, and too many tinkers tinkering themselves.

Some of those who minister professionally to minds disorganized and souls in distress are aware of the dangers and respect, even as they explore, the personalities of their patients. One of them expresses it most aptly. She (I may as well disclose the sex) says that she aims to get at the source of the trouble with the least intrusion into the sanctum of personality. This procedure is in marked contrast to what has happened to many a sufferer who went for a psychic house-cleaning and came back with his house in ruins, not a stone left unturned. His illusions were gone, but so was his hearth and home.

Quite as frequently the patient resented the soul-tinkering, resisted with more wisdom than the practitioner displayed, the label of an irrelevant complex, and declined to follow a clue into a maze with blind or a false ending.

All this I gather from the patient's report. Not that it is always thus. Some who have been through the mill say they found out what they already knew stated in more formidable terms; others that they have been helped for a time but slumped when the effect wore off or another crisis came. It may be that how one reacts to a psychoanalysis is about as exacting a test of one's personality as one could be put to. It cannot avoid being something of a challenge, a measure of quality between the analyst and the analysee. The sizing up isn't one-sided by any means, nor the decision always in favor of the analyst.

While a wise and sympathetic searching of soul and clear-sighted recognition of the inner springs of action is all to the good—for minds gather dust and cobwebs and develop more serious entanglements—tinkering with souls is not a harmless recreation. Outlets we need, for deep emotions and trouble resistances particularly; but they must be carefully provided by wise and judicious ministrations.

On This Date—

NOVEMBER 28th.

Queen Eleanor of Castile died November 28, 1290. Today comes drifting back through time, a pleasant breath of mediaeval romance. The "chere reine" of Edward the first lay dead in Lincolnshire—six hundred and thirty-nine years ago—and Edward was then meditating over her last journey, a journey that was to dot England with crosses, and leave a story as romantic as any that ever grew in history. Wherever she rested for the night there he placed a cross—twelve in all—until the Abbey came in sight, and fixed the last at the village of Charing. Fanciful writers have, of course, sought the derivation of this spot from the words "chere reine." The original cross was of wood, and stood where Charles Stuart now sits on horseback. It was afterwards built in stone by Richard. In 1647 it was removed by parliament, an act that was satirized in verse by a sarcastic poet who wrote:

OLD CHARING CROSS From An OLD PRINT.

> "The Parliament to vote it down
> Conceived it very fitting,
> For fear it should fall and kill them all
> In the House as they were sitting."

Its replica is now modestly tucked away behind the railings of Charing Cross Station. Romance indeed circled around Eleanor. Did not she follow her husband to the Crusades and suck the poison from the wound caused by the assassin's dagger? It is a popular, pleasing, little story, illustrative of the time, although history, while not above enriching its pages with its lighter touch, rather doubts its truth—probably very correctly. In fact, history places the creation of the story at least a century or two after the event. At any rate we know Edward thought a lot of his wife She died his "chere reine," a queen of romance, and, incidentally, the mother of the first Prince of Wales.

Famous Women Bosses of History

By J. P. GLASS

Clotilde, Queen of Franks, Converted Whole Nation to Christianity

"The emissary of Clovis revealed his identity to her."

Clotilde, princess of Burgundy, has gone down in history as the woman who converted a whole nation to Christianity. Here is how it came about:

Her father, King Chilperic of Burgundy, and her two brothers had been murdered by her uncle, Gondebaud, who seized the throne and held Clotilde at his capital, Geneva, practically a prisoner.

While she meditated on her wrongs, hoping for a just vengeance, Clovis I, king of the Franks, heard of her beauty and goodness and thought to make her his wife.

But first he sent an emissary, disguised as a beggar, to find out if the reports of her were true.

Now if Clotilde had not been a keen-witted, determined woman, the romance might not have progressed far. But she was craftier than most men and as bold as any.

Having satisfied himself that she was fit to be his master's mate, the emissary of Clovis revealed his identity to her. Without hesitation the princess spoke.

"Haste thee back to thy master," she said, "and tell him that he must ask my Uncle Gondebaud for my hand at once. His chief counsellor, Aridius, is now at Constantinople. But he is returning at once and once he is here he will balk our betrothal."

To herself she said that though she was Christian and Clovis pagan, he was the man to punish her uncle as he deserved.

Gondebaud agreed to the marriage, little suspecting his niece's hatred for him and thinking a union with Clovis would strengthen him. He sent Clotilde off in charge of a deputation of Franks to join her betrothed.

Aridius, arriving at Geneva a few days later, regarded Gondebaud sadly.

"This marriage will be a pledge of perpetual strife," he said. "Have you forgotten that you slew this woman's father and brothers? What think you she is made of."

Clotilde's subsequent power to influence Clovis is best illustrated by the story of his conversion to Christianity.

She wished to baptise her first son. Pagan Clovis objected, but permitted it. The infant died. Nevertheless, when a second son arrived, the inflexible queen again insisted on baptism.

This child survived. Clovis grew less skeptical of Christianity and in 486, when he went to war against a Germanic tribe, promised Clotilde he would embrace her faith if victorious.

He was victorious and on Christmas day, that same year, he and most of his followers were baptised by the Bishop of Rheims. It was with this ceremony that the kingdom of France was born. Clovis, its founder, triumphed over all adversaries. Among those he subdued—at the instigation of the relentless and unforgetting Clotilde—was her uncle, Gondebaud, whom he made his humble vassal.

Clotilde was canonized as a saint.

SHORTAGE OF ELECTRICITY NOW SERIOUS

Street Cars Taken Off Service in Favor of Busses

Canadian Press

VANCOUVER, Nov. 28.—A distinct darkening of the city Wednesday night brought home to citizens of Vancouver, the seriousness of the power shortage which has struck this and other centers of the Pacific northwest due to the sub-normal rain fall during the past year.

All street lights which possibly could be spared were out. Electric signs were curtailed.

Tram cars moved along like spectres, their blazing front lights out and dim-lights burning inside. The strap-hanger who would read his newspaper these evenings must have a sharp eye.

Street cars are being replaced on some lines by busses. Railway coach cars will be put on interurban routes and the B.C. Electric railway company is planning to obtain two locomotives from C.P.R. to replace electric rolling stock, on the Fraser Valley lines.

The company has also telegraphed the board of railway commissioners at Ottawa and the minister of railways, Victoria, for permission to make schedule adjustments.

Householders have been urged to use as little lighting and other power as possible.

If rainfall does not occur in the next few days, further steps will be taken toward additional conservation of power.

A few private steam plants have been pressed into service, and it is possible that a small amount of off-peak power will be obtained from Bellingham, Washington, between the hours of midnight and early morning. Apart from this there is no relief from across the border which is as badly stricken.

Never in the history of the Pacific coast has there been such a serious power problem as prevails in Vancouver, Seattle and other cities west of the rockies, W. G. Murrin, president of the British Columbia Electric company which supplies all power in Vancouver and vicinity, said today.

Norman E. Pearson Tells How Cuticura Healed Pimples

"The trouble first started with a few blotches on my face. A little later pimples formed and spread all over it. They were quite large and some of them festered. The pimples itched and burned and bothered me a lot. Many nights I could not sleep on account of the irritation, and when I scratched it caused disfigurement.

"I tried different remedies without success. I had the trouble about four months when I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. Magnesia Best for Your Indigestion

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestants

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically from gas, sourness or indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestants, and instead take a teaspoonful or four tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and make digestion easy. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

Fatal Fire Laid To Racketeers

Building racketeers were blamed for this spectacular blaze, pictured here at its height, which destroyed an apartment building under construction in New York. One workman, trapped by the flames, was burned to death on an upper story of the structure. The building was owned by the father of one of the grand jurors who are investigating a series of similar fires, all of mysterious origin, which have razed other new apartment houses in Manhattan in recent months.

been revoked or susepnded and who were found operating cars.

All licenses suspended or revoked by a police magistrate are taken up immediately in the court and forwarded by the clerk to the department of the provincial secretary. The names and particulars of the drivers are added by the city police to the list already referred to, posted up in all stations. Further, since revocations or suspensions may be cancelled or removed by the Provincial Secretary, the Chief Constable wrote the Deputy Provincial Secretary requesting, to be advised from time to time of all cases where this has been done, in order that the city police lists might be kept up to date in this respect also.

The second charge is that the Alberta provincial police, when asked, stated that they had not received from the Chief Constable of the city a list of the country residents whose licenses had been suspended or cancelled. There is no obligation on the Chief Constable to keep the Alberta provincial police informed of such cancellations or suspensions, any more than upon them to keep him similarly informed. All they have to do is to get such information from the department of the Provincial Secretary. The Chief Constable has neither forwarded any such lists to the provincial police, nor has he ever received any similar lists from them.

A third charge is that a traffic officer of the Edmonton police department stated, in reply to an inquiry, that he had not any list of cancelled licenses. The Chief Constable reports that he has questioned all the traffic officers of the department, and that they all deny having made any such statement, or having given any information of this nature to any person. In any event, in view of the existence of the list already referred to the reply, if given, was not correct.

A fourth statement in the article is that "Down at the license department of the Provincial Secretary's office there is no list of endorsations and cancellations of drivers' licenses by police magistrates in the city." This of course is not a charge against the Chief Constable, but it would appear to be about as well grounded as those made against him, since I have the assurance of the Deputy Provincial Secretary that he has full particulars at his office, to which all cancellations and revocations are forwarded immediately by the convicting justice or magistrate.

The statement that "many drivers who have their licenses cancelled or endorsed continue to operate cars undetected" is quite misleading. It implies that mere endorsation debars the driver from the right to operate his car. This of course is not the case. Such endorsation is merely a record which is available against him on any subsequent conviction. The statement further implies that the number of drivers who, notwithstanding suspension or revocation of their licenses, continue to operate cars is considerable. That is not so. If all Edmonton drivers who had lost their licenses in either of these ways since the law came into effect were continuing to operate, there would be only five of them, and I question whether the last of the five had suffered his loss at the time to which the "eminent Edmonton citizen" referred.

We all of us have a sufficient number of actual sins for which to answer without the need of the addition of others of which we are not guilty; and in fairness to the Chief Constable I feel that the statements referred to should not be allowed to remain unchallenged.

Yours truly,
AMBROSE U. G. BURY,
Mayor.

RE MOTORISTS, BYLAWS AND POLICE ACTION

Editor Bulletin:—

Sir,—It was with a feeling of mixed surprise and hilarity that I read in last evening's issue of the Bulletin the story of Chief of Police Shute and his "wonder brigade" with especial reference to the checking up of motorist's licenses.

Ever since the inception of these pieces of paper, the average individual who was forced to pay out good money, has been wondering what the joke was. It is now beginning to come to light that they are just "scraps of paper". It was funny enough to fill out the form, answering the asinine questions, without having to carry around a "ticket" which proves nothing. For instance, if one is checked up and asked, "Where's your license?" the party "held up" can produce one of these slips and no one on earth can say that the ticket belongs to the party showing it. The writer was held up at Cooking Lake the other Sunday by one of the A. P. P. and asked to "produce it." The cop looked it over and calmly asked "Is that your name?" The answer was "Can you prove that it is not?" and the cop walked off none the wiser.

Passing on to the next item. The matter of checking up on "endorsed" and "cancelled" licenses. If, as the story goes, the chief of police has not given out a list of names, how are the cops supposed to know? Possibly the chief thinks that they are bloodhounds and can sniff out a guilty motorist.

The readers of this paper have not yet been informed through the press of the penalties imposed on erring motorists who still operate their cars after having the license cancelled. The advertisements published in the newspapers are non-committal. They only say "heavy penalty for not having one." In view of some of the so-called "heavy penalties" imposed in the city, the motorist is not worrying any.

Friend Journal, in an editorial, is very much concerned over the number of jay-walkers in Edmonton. This reads like the editor of that paper was living in a place the size of Ellerslie. Most people of this city have made visits to other places in Canada and also the States, and know what traffic is like. In this city it is amusing to hear these yokels talk about the busy streets. Why, for three parts of the day you could go to sleep on Jasper avenue and not be disturbed. If the bylaw against jaywalking is on the books, then either enforce it or throw it out and be done with it.

For a number of months now the city council has been "sitting" over the new traffic bylaws. So far, with the exception of a few hints, no one except the aldermen are any the wiser as to what is going to be enacted. It is true that copies have been handed to the motor association and been passed upon. In all probability those who passed on them were not vitally interested in them, except in the matter of parking cars on McDougall avenue. Why not have them published and let the general motorist have a chance of looking the bylaw over and making suggestions? At the present time there are many traffic bylaws which are openly flouted.

Parking bylaws at the present time seem to be in force in an effort to get the motorist's goat. Despite the "no parking" signs in different parts of the city, one can see cars ranged right alongside the signs. Witness the number of cars that park on the south side of Jasper between Thornton Court and 97th street, for only one instance. "Twenty minute parking only," is another of the signs on the streets, but it is only a sign in very many places along Jasper. Once in a while some motorist is hauled up before the magistrate and duly pays his fine.

Instead of worrying about how long a car is parked, let the police officials chase after the "one headlight" menace and the "no rear-light" motorist. For several days the writer has kept a record of these individuals passed during a trip along Jasper from 97th street to 124th street and over the high level bridge. On Jasper no fewer than 28 cars were noticed with only one headlight and 10 without a rear-light. On the high level bridge seven cars went by "one-eyed" and two without a rear light. The number passed on the Cooking Lake trail one day with only one headlight was six, and not until within a few feet of them was one able to tell which side the light was on. Fully one-half of the above totals had the "off" side-light on, which anyone must acknowledge, is more than dangerous. If Chief Shute wants something to do with his cohorts, sick 'em on to the nit-wits who run around in cars with one headlight or no tail-light. Make the penalty severe (not such baby play as endorsing a driving license) and then check up the motorist to see that he has got his lights fixed.

Finally, we come to the modern craze, speed. Apparently some drivers, especially taxis, can get away with any speed that they think they can go. One has only to drive along Portage to find that out. The city bylaws call for a speed of 25 miles per hour. Some keep below it, the majority observe it, while the rest of the drivers flout it. Either keep the bylaw or else ditch it along with the other antiquated ones and get at least a little modern. Most auto associations, the world over, have come to the conclusion that speed limits are out of date, and that drivers have some common sense and can use it. If the conditions warrant it, then let the car go 35 or 40 miles per, and should there be an accident, then it is up to the driver to prove that he was not driving recklessly. In some places it is dangerous to drive at a greater speed than 10 miles per hour, as at the south end of the high level bridge, while in other cases there is no harm in going 40 miles per hour. This does not mean that the streets are to be used as speed tracks or that because a driver is going at high speed that he can hog the whole road and not get over to let a car pass him either way.

Perhaps if we can get rid of a number of these ancient bylaws, Edmonton will begin to be a motorists' paradise. The above suggestions would mean an increased police force, but that is necessary.

Yours truly,
W. J. BIRCH.

Nine Arabs To Die For Hebrew Deaths

Associated Press

HAIFA, Palestine, Nov. 28.—Nine Arabs were sentenced to death and two to 15 years' imprisonment Wednesday for the murder of a Jewish family at Safed during recent disturbances. Safed was the scene of one of the bloodiest riots between the races and was only exceeded in number of the slain by the massacre at Hebron.

DOROTHY DIX

Is the Easy Alimony System Keeping Men From Marriage?—Folly of Playing With Matrimony Should a Son Bring His Girl Friends Home?

DEAR MISS DIX.—We men are on our guard. We are watching out and getting leery of marriage since the divorce records furnish such glowing accounts of women getting divorced and living on alimony on easy street everafter. The records of the city in which I live show for last year: Marriages, 1,147. Divorces, 928. Men who have a good business, or draw a good salary, dare not take a chance where there is only 25 per cent. or less of a chance of a marriage venture being a success. They hesitate in assuming the prospective chance of supporting an idle woman on alimony. Change the easy alimony system, then men will not think every woman or girl is a gold-digger and 100 per cent. more lonely men would venture into wedlock, and the fair ones would land their meal tickets. OSCAR.

Answer:

I think you are right, Oscar, and I often wonder that any man has the courage to take a chance in the matrimonial lottery when it is run as it is at present. For there is no denying that the cards are stacked against him, and that he doesn't get a fair show.

In every marriage that is a failure it is the man who has to pay, and pay, and pay, no matter whether he was the one who was at fault or not, and nothing is more iniquitously unjust than that a good upright man, who has done everything in his power to be a model husband, can be divorced by an unprincipled woman and forced by the law to support her the balance of her life.

There are just as many bad wives as there are bad husbands, and a large percentage of the women who ask divorces have never made any honest effort to make their marriages a success.

Many of them ask for divorces because they were not willing to do housework, and didn't want to have children, and wanted to live free and independent lives, and it is outrageous that their husbands should be victimized by having to pay these quitters alimony that maudlinly sentimental judges award them.

On the other hand, when a woman has been a good and true and faithful wife, a real helpmate to her husband, and he forsakes her after she is middle-aged for another woman, she is entitled to a fair compensation for the years that he has robbed her of, and the service she has given him.

No subject is more complicated than the alimony question. I think it should be settled before a couple get married, and in these days, when divorce hovers on the horizon of every couple who enter into the holy estate, that they should have a marriage contract and agree before marriage on what compensation, if any, a man should make to his wife in case they separate. If there are no children and the woman has earned her own living before marriage, there is no reason why she should not take the same sporting chance on marriage that the man does, and not ask for alimony at all.

And in every divorce case I think that before a wife is granted alimony she should have to prove by credible witnesses that she has been a good wife, that she has made a comfortable home, and has been thrifty and economical, and reasonably pleasant to get along with. No man should be forced to pay alimony to a wife who has reneged on her part of the bargain.

It is fair that a man should have to support the children he has brought into the world, but supporting an able-bodied woman who has quit on her job is another matter that should be determined strictly upon the individual circumstances.

Certainly alimony should not be permitted to remain the potent source of easy graft that many women find it to be now.

DOROTHY DIX.

DEAR MISS DIX.—We are a club of girls in high school. We all have fellows under 20 years of age. They wish us to become secretly married, but still continue our studies. The boys do not make enough to support us, so after we were married we would have to work. Do you think that we should do as the boys wish us to? UNDECIDED GIRLS.

Answer:

For heavens sake, no. You would be crazy to do such a thing. It would be wrecking your lives before they have fairly commenced.

Stop, my poor foolish little children, and consider what you are about to do. No doubt it seems very romantic to you now and a great lark for the whole bunch of you, boys and girls, to go off and get married, but it won't seem romantic or amusing to you when you find out that you have tied yourselves for life to husbands and wives that you do not really love, and that you are married people with no homes, no way even of providing yourselves with the bare necessities of life.

Don't marry anybody secretly. Secret marriages have always a tang of disgrace about them, and people always look askance at a belated marriage certificate, even if it is genuine. Don't marry until you can marry honestly and openly and decently in the sight of your community.

Don't marry until you have had your playtime in life. If you marry when you are schoolgirls and boys and get right down to the stern business of life, you will always feel that you have been cheated out of your youth, and by the time you are 22 or 23 years old you will rebel, and begin to want to dance, and flirt, and run around. Most of the roaming husbands and wives are those who married before they had had their fling at life and were ready to settle down.

Don't marry until you have some settled way of making a living. Marriage has to be financed just like any other proposition, and the boy and girl who get married before they can afford it are sure to quarrel like cat and dog. The boy who takes a family on his shoulders to support never has any chance of rising in the world. He never can give up a poor job to look for a better one, and he has all of the ambition crushed out of him by bills.

Marriage is for grown-ups. It is not a diversion for children. Wait until you are old enough to assume its responsibilities. DOROTHY DIX.

DEAR MISS DIX.—I am a widow with a son who has just started taking girls out to parties. I have always encouraged him to bring his boy friends home, and have told him to bring his girl friends also, but a friend thinks I am not doing right in this. Am I wrong? MRS. B.

Answer:

You are exactly right to have your son bring his girl friends as well as his boy friends to your house. That gives not only him, but you, a line upon them.

A girl seen against the background of a home shows just what she is, and many a little gum-chewing flapper, who looked attractive enough on the street, will show her lack of refinement in your drawing-room, and thereby disillusion your son. And you may be very sure that your boy is only going with nice girls if he brings them home with him. DOROTHY DIX.

Little Stories For Bedtime

Peter Rabbit's Nose Tells Him Something

By THORNTON BURGESS

(Copyright)

It's very, very curious,
I must confess, to me
How very, very curious
Some other folk can be.

Take Peter Rabbit for instance. One would think that after all the scrapes Peter's curiosity has gotten him into he would have learned a lesson never to be forgotten. But sometimes it seems as if some people never could learn. When Peter Rabbit saw in the snow near the great rock, deep in the Green Forest, the tracks of Reddy Fox, such tracks as Reddy makes only when he is running in great fright, Peter's common sense told him that this was no place for him to stay. If there was something there to frighten Reddy like that, the sooner he, Peter, got away the better.

Peter sat up very straight for a long time looking and listening.

But Peter's curiosity whispered that he ought, he really ought, to find out what it was that had frightened Reddy so. The idea of running away when he couldn't see anything to run away from! "What was it? What could have given Reddy such a fright?" whispered Curiosity. "Never mind. Get away from here, and find out afterward, if you can," whispered Common Sense. "If there really is anything to be afraid of, you ought to know what it is, so as to warn others," whispered Curiosity. "Nothing of the kind. Let others find out for themselves," whispered Common Sense.

"But I want to know," said Peter, right out loud, and that meant, of course, that he didn't intend to listen to Common Sense. Curiosity was the stronger. Peter sat up very straight for a long time, looking and listening. The longer he looked and listened the more puzzled he grew. Nothing unusual was to be seen. Nothing unusual was to be heard. In fact, nothing at all was to be heard. It was so still that Peter could hear his own heart beating. You know it was beating a little harder and faster than usual because Peter was excited.

"Blacky the Crow said that Reddy got his fright out on that great rock," thought Peter. "I don't see anything out there. I believe I'll go out there and look about."

So slowly, stopping every other hop to sit up and look and listen, Peter made his way out to the very place where Reddy Fox had curled up for the sun-nap that he didn't get. There was a splendid view from the great rock. Peter could see for quite a distance among the trees of the Green Forest. But look as he would he could see nothing to be afraid of. In fact he couldn't see a single living thing but the trees. For a long time he sat looking and listening. Then he settled himself comfortably for a sun-bath. It was very warm and nice out there, and Peter was glad that he had come even if he hadn't found out what had frightened Reddy Fox.

As he sat there on that bare place on the great rock, Peter looked almost like a part of the rock itself, just a little gray-brown bump on the top of the rock. It was so very still and warm and nice that presently Peter began to feel sleepy. He was just beginning to doze when the same thing happened to him that had happened to Reddy Fox. A wandering little breeze tickled Peter's nose. Instantly Peter's eyes flew wide open. That funny little nose of his began to wabble as only Peter can make it wabble. Once more the little breeze tickled it. There was no doubt this time—Peter smelled Buster Bear! His nose told him that Buster Bear was right close by. Peter knew now what had frightened Reddy Fox. But where was Buster? That was something to find out. Peter made up his mind right then and there that he would find out before he went home to the Old Brier Patch.

Next Story: Peter Rabbit's Great Discovery.

Knight of the Road: "Say, boy your dog bit me on the ankle."

"Boy: "Well, that's as high as he could reach. You wouldn't expect a little pup like that to bite you on the neck, would you?"

A great philosopher has said, "The most utterly lost of all days is that in which you have not laughed."

Lieut. Col. L. R. Lafleche, Ottawa, New President Canadian Legion

TWO ALBERTA MEN ELECTED TO EXECUTIVE

W. J. Hill, of Edmonton, to Represent Alberta on Council

By M. McINTYRE HOOD
Canadian Press Staff Correspondent

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 28.—Lieut.-Col. L. R. Lafleche, of Ottawa, was Wednesday afternoon unanimously elected to the presidency of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, for the next year, the great assembly of delegates giving the new president a tremendous ovation.

Colonel Lafleche accepted the office only after a message had been received from Sir Arthur Currie, the retiring president asking on the grounds of ill-health only, that he be relieved of the office. As a tribute to General Currie, the convention unanimously created the office of grand president to which he was acclaimed.

The complete list of officers elected includes many men distinguished in the service of Canada and the Empire in both peace and war, and is as follows:

Honorary Patron: H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

Grand Patron: His Excellency Viscount Willingdon.

Patron: Right Hon. Sir William Mulock.

Honorary Dominion Presidents: Lieut.-General Sir Richard Turner, V.C., Montreal, and Lieut.-Col. James McAra, Mayor of Regina.

Honorary Dominion Vice-Presidents: Col. Canon H. J. Cody, Toronto; James Robinson, Vancouver and Col. G. E. Saunders, Calgary.

Dominion Chaplains: Lieut.-Col. Venerable Archdeacon F. G. Scott, Montreal, and Major the Rev. Ronald MacDonald, M.C., Nova Scotia.

Second Vice-President: Brig. Gen. Sir Alex. Ross, Yorkton, Sask.

Dominion Chairman: A. E. Moore, Winnipeg.

Dominion Vice Chairman: E. W. Cornell, London.

Honorary Treasurer: J. A. MacIsaac, Ottawa.

Dominion Executive Council: British Columbia, Col. W. W. Foster, Vancouver; Alberta, W. J. Hill, Edmonton; Saskatchewan, S. P. Dundee, Regina; Manitoba, Eli Spencer, Winnipeg; Ontario, Lieut. Col. J. Keillor McKay, Toronto, and Lieut. Col. F. J. Pickering, St. Thomas; Quebec, George H. Abbott, Montreal; New Brunswick, Rev. Father Lochary, St. John, N.B.; Nova Scotia, Col. Harry Young, North Sydney; Prince Edward Island, Dr. H. D. Johnson, Charlottetown.

Tubercular Veterans' Branch: Dr. V. C. Gillmann, Ottawa.

Imperial Veterans' Division: Major Norman Dingle, Calgary.

The constitution was amended so as to make General Sir Percy Lake, the first dominion president, a life member of the dominion executive council.

The place of the next dominion convention will be Niagara Falls.

Two cities invited the convention, the other being Port Arthur, Ont., proposed by delegate Neil Campbell, who, after the vote gave the decision to Niagara Falls, by an overwhelming majority, graciously moved to make the decision unanimous.

HUGHES DENIES 'PEN' TROUBLE

Says Warden Away Because of Ill Health—Deputy Resigns

anadian Press

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—Denial was made by Brigadier General W. St. Pierre Hughes, dominion superintendent of penitentiaries, late this afternoon; of reports reaching the capital that the placing of Inspector E. R. Jackson, Ottawa, in charge of the institution was on account of the alleged discovery of a plot on the part of the convicts to burn down the penitentiary.

"The report is not correct," Brigadier General Hughes declared. "Inspector Jackson has been placed in charge of the Prince Albert penitentiary by reason of the illness of Warden W. J. McLeod." Inspector Jackson would be in charge of the institution, Brigadier General Hughes stated, pending the recovery of Warden McLeod. Deputy Warden R. Wyley had recently resigned, Brigadier General Hughes added, on account of poor health.

DUCE ISSUES WARNING

PARIS, Nov. 28—One year's solitary confinement with hard labor for the woman who breaks her marriage vows is an important clause in the new Fascist penal code about to come into force, reports the Rome correspondent of the "Temps." Her accomplice in this social crime is liable to the same rigorous punishment, and the law becomes operative when her husband lodges a complaint.

SASKATCHEWAN HAS FAIR-DAY

Exhibitors From That Province Capture Many Awards

Canadian Press

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—Wednesday was Saskatchewan day at the Royal Winter Fair and the show ring winnings coincided to a pretty fair extent as the province honored made a big sweep in the Belgian horses which were placed in the afternoon. This, the largest of the western provinces has an imposing list of wins to its credit, some 200 odd prizes in all, including the classes in which wins from this section might be expected, like heavy horses, heavy cattle, butter and seeds, but also several notable captures in dairy cattle and poultry. To date the list of winnings from Saskatchewan is estimated as follows: Horses 87, cattle 15, sheep 7, swine 6, wool 6, turkeys 11, geese 3, poultry 2, creamery butter 21, first prizes.

Shires were also judged but there was practically no competition in them. G. E. Morden of Oakville had senior and grand champion stallion on Weston King and Dr. C. N. Blanchard, Freeman, the Junior ribbon on Kitty's Model. Senior and grand champion mare award went to A. Hewson, Mailton, on Tuttle Brook Nellie and Junior to Morden, on Fancy Model.

Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan share in the Belgian horse awards. Haas Brothers, of Paris, had senior and grand stallion on Carmandale with Junior and Reserve grand going to Arthur Lombaert, Mariapolis, Man., on Balcon Farcour, C. M. Rear, Regina had reserve junior. Alen Kole of Brandon had senior and grand mare on Peggy with Robert Thomas winning the junior ribbon on Paragon Rose. And also reserve grand on the same animal. Haas Brothers had reserve senior, and Whyte Bros. Pilot Mound, Man., reserve junior.

Untaught Artist Recreates Nature

TORONTO, nt., Nov. 28—Charles Vollrath, of Chalk River, Ont., Dominion forestry, gained distinction in probably an unique manner. With hatchet and jack-knife, he is realizing childhood ambitions and creating marvellously life-like reproductions, on a very small scale, of the wild life of that new country.

Moose, eight inches in height, carved out of basswood, give the impression they are scenting the breeze. A six-inch buck peers menacingly. Tiny foxes, heads thrown back, seem ready to howl at an instant's notice. Miniature pine forests, deer, birds and more pretentious works such as scenes from the Bible, all are the products of his skilful hands.

Vollrath revealed to the Mail and Empire that he had been fascinated by the idea of carving when a boy in Germany. But after a few rude efforts, he abandoned the idea for almost 40 years. Now his work is making itself known, and many samples have been taken out by tourists.

Women In Quest Of Refueling Record

Associated Press

METROPOLITAN AIRPORT, LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 28. — Once more aloft in quest of world endurance refueling flight honors, two young women planned to eat their Thanksgiving dinner 1500 feet above San Francisco valley today.

Taking their 300 horsepower biplane aloft at 9:40 a.m. yesterday, the girls, Elinor Smith of New York, and Bobbie Trout, of Los Angeles, passed the 24 hour mark this morning. The two achieved two successful refueling contacts before dark.

Up to this morning the girls had taken aboard 505 gallons of gasoline, including 240 gallons in the tanks when they rose from the field. This is a heavier load than they carried before.

The avowed purpose of the young women is to better the record of 420 hours, 21 minutes, 58 seconds, held by Dale Jackson and Ernest O'Brien of St. Louis.

British Dirigible R-101 Inspected

Associated Press

HOWDEN, England, Nov. 28.—Great Britain's privately built dirigible, the R-100, has been completed and underwent press inspection today in her hangar here.

The dirigible cost £450,000 (about $2,258,000), while the estimates of her government-built sister, the R-101 were for £474,000 (about $2,370,000) with an additional £53,000 for engines.

One of the chief differences between the two ships is that the R-101 is petrol driven and the R-100 is oil driven.

CANADIAN COAL FOR CANADA

Sherbrooke Tribune (Lib.): The coal industry in Canada needs for its development assistance from all the great Canadian corporations, in fact it needs the help of the entire population. This assistance has been withheld in the past, and it is only when this anomaly disappears that our coal mines will be able to produce at their full capacity and to do good business.

SACRED RELIC

TURIN, Nov. 28.—The sacred winding sheet in which the body of Christ was wrapped after His removal from the cross, bearing traces of the blood of the Saviour, a precious relic of the House of Savoy, will be exposed to public view on the occasion of the forthcoming wedding of the Italian Crown Prince to Marie Jose of Belgium.

RAILROAD MAGNATE DIES

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Benjamin Franklin Yoakum, a farmer's boy who became a railroad magnate and developed transportation for areas of the west and southwest, died at his home today. He was 70 years old His most notable work was in expanding the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad, which he joined in 1896, becoming its president in 1900.

SOVIET PLANES TO AID SEARCH

Will be Available to Hunt For Two Men Lost in Arctic

Canadian Press

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 28.—Two Russian planes brought to Providence Bay aboard the Soviet ice-breaker Litke, will be available to aid in the search for Pilot Carl Ben Eielson and his mechanic Earl Borland, as soon as weather conditions in the north moderate, a radio message received at Juneau, Alaska, by Governor George W. Parks revealed today.

The Alaska Airways, Inc., of which Eielson was general manager, has four planes which will be assigned to the search when atmospheric conditions permit.

Eielson, with Pilot Frank Borbandt, was engaged in transporting passengers and furs from the trading ship Nanuk, icebound at North Cape, Siberia, to Nome.

On their second trip, Eielson and Borbandt became lost. Borbandt, who returned to Nome to repair his plane, took off yesterday for Teller, Alaska, and will resume his search when the weather permits.

The Scotch are such good golfers because they realize the fewer times they hit the ball the longer it will last.

During the hearing of a case a man began clattering about in the back of the court rom pushing over chairs and generally upsetting things.

"Young man," said the judge at length, sternly to him, "You make a great deal of noise."

"Your honor," came the reply, "I have lost my overcoat, and I am looking for it."

"Well, well," snapped the irate judge, "people often lose whole suits here without half as much disturbance."

Canadian Girl Stowaways Fail To Make Grade

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—Helen Knight of British Columbia; Joanne Nelson Scott of London, Ont., and June Evans, New York City, all giving their ages as 21, were removed from the Matson liner Manoa Wednesday after having stowed away for a trip to Honolulu. Forced by hunger to reveal themselves, one hour after the ship had left the Golden Gate, the master decided to return and put the girls ashore at San Francisco.

A launch carried the girls from the liner at Quarantine and the big ship turned about and continued its interrupted journey.

Matson officials said the girls would not be detained.

Imprisoned K.C. Tries Reprisals

Canadian Press

TORONTO, Nov. 28. — Charging "assault and false imprisonment," Louis M. Singer, K.C., organizer of the Amalgamated Builders' Council, Wednesday instituted suit for $100,000 against Gordon Waldron, K.C., royal commissioner appointed by the Canadian government to investigate the activities of the A.B.C. in various cities throughout Ontario. A writ, claiming the above stated damages, was issued at Osgoode Hall late Wednesday afternoon by J. G. Kelly, counsel for Mr. Singer.

The action is based upon the discharge of Singer from custody by Chief Justice Meredith of the common pleas court, after the A.B.C. head had been ordered jailed for contempt by Mr. Waldron following his refusal to "answer questions and produce documents" in connection with the royal commission's enquiry.

Farming Proposals Being Discussed

Canadian Press

SASKATOON, Nov. 28—A committee of three representing Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, was in session Wednesday at the offices of the United Farmers of Canada, at Saskatoon, framing proposals to place before the three farmer-organizations regarding changes in banking legislation.

The farming organizations in the past have asked for many such changes and the committee is trying to bring about a uniformity in the requests of the three bodies.

The members of the committee are A. F. Aitken, Moyerton, Alberta, John Arnott, Roblin, Man., and George Stirling, of this city.

Presentation Made By Gadsby C.G.I.T.

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

GADSBY, Nov. 28—Following their regular meeting on Tuesday evening, the Swastika group of the C.G.I.T. held an enjoyable party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Drinnan. Singing, games and contests were enjoyed followed by lunch, after which a presentation was made to Mrs. S. Steele the former group leader. Edith Rich, president, made the presentation to which Mrs. Steele replied graciously.

Mrs. R. Menzies has kindly agreed to assist Miss Ada Ghent with the leadership following Mrs. Shaw's removal. The meeting on Dec. 4 will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Gravely.

First Winter Wedding Is Smart Affair Of Wednesday

Snow Falls Softly on Cathedral as Society Gathers for Roscoe-Kirkpatrick Nuptials in All Saints

The winter's first snow had put a covering of bridal whiteness over All Saints' cathedral on Wednesday evening for the marriage of Miss Olga Mary Louise Kirkpatrick, only daughter of Mrs. Reginald N. Kirkpatrick and the late Mr. Kirkpatrick and Mr. Harold Morton Roscoe, B.Sc., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Roscoe of Centreville, N. S. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the chancel and choir loft being banked with ferns, palms and chrysanthemums, these flowers also marking the guest pews.

Mrs. E. Clare Darling

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Reginald Kirkpatrick of Vancouver, the bride was a graceful picture in a gown of ivory transparent velvet fashioned in long flowing lines with a court train and close fitting sleeves. Her filmy veil falling over the face was caught at the sides with dainty clusters of orange blossoms. White roses and lily of the valley composed the bouquet. Her attendants, Mrs. E. Clare Darling and Mrs. James C. Thompson wore princess frocks of chiffon fashioned with long sleeves, and their hats were of gold lace, with the long back line. Mrs. Darling's gown was a coral shade and Mrs. Thompson's of robin's egg blue, and they carried sheafs of sunset chrysanthemums. Mr. Neil Primrose attended the bridegroom and the ushers were Mr. Frederick B. Watt and Mr. Robert Peel.

Service Fully Choral

The service was fully choral, and during the signing of the register the choir sang, "O Perfect Love." Rev. William Leversedge officiated and Mr. Henry Atack was the organist.

Mrs. James C. Thompson

Following the ceremony, a smart reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, who wore a smart model of black georgette and silver lace with a black metallic lace hat. Her corsage bouquet was of crimson roses and lily of the valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe left later in the evening for the Pacific coast. For travelling Mrs. Roscoe chose a sport frock of wool georgette, over which was worn a coat of brown broadcloth with fur collar and a brown felt hat. Upon their return to the city in two weeks, they will take up residence on 127nd street.

Mrs. T. W. Bull Is At Home for Sister From West Africa

Mrs. T. W. Bull, Saskatchewan Drive, received about 80 guests on Wednesday afternoon in honor of her sister, Miss Cork, who is missionary on furlough from the Belgian Congo, West Central Africa. Mrs. Thomas Buckham assisted in receiving. Miss Cork has paid several previous visits to Edmonton, and has many friends here. Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. C. J. Lakey, Mrs. A. Horne, Mrs. G. Bowen. The assistants were Mrs. H. Haughton, Mrs. S. M. Boulton, Mrs. W. Horrocks, Mrs. J. F. Cargill and Mrs. J. Pollock. Mrs. C. P. Howe was in charge of a collection of curios in the sun-room. Amongst these were beautiful baskets for domestic and other uses, a native loom and a large number of products woven in the natural shade with red and blue borders, the material used being vegetable fibre, and the colors also being of vegetable origin; a warrior's big shield and a war gong; native drinking-cups made in one piece and carved in patterns. The use of ores was exemplified in knives for shaving as well as knives in leather sheaths for the belt, long spears, and a murderous executioner's sword; an instrument for telegraphy with two little clubs for beating out messages in a sort of primitive Morse code; a carrier for the baby made of two bands of undressed antelope skin, arranged to hold the baby firmly across the mother's hips; elephant tusks, crocodile teeth; miniature canoes with their paddles; weird charms from the witch-doctor, guaranteed to keep at bay all evil spirits; a big wonderfully woven mat which serves as a sleeping rug and also to wrap up the body after death; specimens of school work done in the Lolanga school by pupils corresponding to the fourth grade; last and by no means least, a hymn book translated into the native dialect by Miss Cork. Before this no written or printed language existed.

No More Piles

Pile sufferers can oly get quick, safe and lasting relief by removing the cause—bad blood circulation in the lower bowel. Cutting and salves can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid, a harmless tablet, succeeds because it relieves this blood congestion and strengthens the affected parts. Hem-Roid has a wonderful record for quick, safe and lasting relief to Pile sufferers. It will do the same for you or money back—service drug stores and druggists anywhere sell Hem-Roid with this guarantee.

"MY lipstick isn't always coming off!"

"What do you use then? I've always wanted to ask you. I think yours looks so natural!"

"Why, Kissproof, my dear—haven't you heard of it? It's the very latest thing in Paris and New York. You put it on in the morning and it stays on the whole day long. Look at mine—and I went bathing with Jim this morning!"

"How lovely! Do let me try it."

"Here you are. Only just a touch now—that's right. Up and down though—not across. Now rub it in well. Might be your own coloring, mightn't it, and you'll find it never stains . . ."

Kissproof, the modern waterproof lipstick is everywhere revolutionizing women's use of cosmetics. Every woman owes it to herself to try this amazingly permanent, natural coloring. Insist on the genuine—at all toilet counters.

A brilliant affair of this winter's social season in Calgary was the dinner and dance given by Hon. Lieutenant-Colonel and Mrs. James Hossack Woods at the Hotel Palliser on Tuesday evening. The host and hostess received their guests, who numbered more than two hundred, in the roundroom. Mrs. Woods wore for the occasion her court presentation gown, a beautiful French model of pale rose satin. The bodice hung separately from the skirt and was beautifully embroidered in silver thread and crystals. A train of rose and silver lame lined in shell pink chiffon was gracefully attached at the shoulder. She carried a graceful ostrich feather fan. An orchestra provided soft strains of music during the reception before dinner. Dinner was served in the main dining room, which shimmered romantically in the soft glow of hundreds of candles. The entire scene was illuminated solely by orange and gold candles in tall silver candelabra. Masses of chrysanthemums in sunset and gold shades decorated the long narrow tables. After dinner the guests enjoyed dancing and bridge until midnight in the ballroom and accompanying apartments.

Edmonton Will Have Little Theatre In Near Future

Mrs. J. D. Hyndman Heads Temporary Committee Formed

A "Little Theatre" will be established in Edmonton shortly as the result of a meeting which was held in the Senate Chamber of the University on Wednesday evening. Dr. R. C. Wallace presided at the meeting, which was attended by thirty persons who have been interested in the development of amateur drama in the city. After an informal discussion it was decided, upon a resolution of Mrs. J. D. Hyndman, seconded by Mrs. William J. Dick, that a definite organization be established. Mrs. Hyndman was appointed convener of a temporary committee to investigate the working of the "Little Theatre" in other Canadian cities, the other members being Mrs. A. L. Burt, Mrs. Nelson Haynes, Mrs. Ronald W. Pearson, Mrs. J. C. Biggs, Mrs. S. Tupper Bigelow, Mr. Thomas Dalkin, Mr. William J. Dick, Dr. W. G. Hardy, Mr. James Adam, and Mr. Frank Holroyd. Another meeting will be held in the Senate Chamber on December 11 at 8 p.m., when this committee will report and "The Little Theatre" of Edmonton will be formally organized.

Three Branches

The aims and the probable difficulties of a Little Theatre in Edmonton were discussed. It was suggested that the organization should consist of three branches: the executive which would manage the business end, the active members, who would take part in the productions, and the associate members, who would support the undertakings. It was announced that Convocation Hall would be available for the actual presentation of any plays the Little Theatre might put on, although it was pointed out that a hall in town might attract more people.

A general manager will probably be appointed to superintend the acticities of the Little Theatre.

A letter from the Community Players of Winnipeg was read. These players put on five major productions during the year and every second Saturday have performances of an informal nature.

Present at the Meeting

Those present at the meeting were: Dr. R. C. Wallace, Mrs. J. C. Wyndman, Mrs. W. A. R. Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Dick, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Smith, Mrs. Nelson Haynes, Mrs. Charles Hyndman, Mrs. J. C. Biggs, Mrs. J. C. Sherry, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford S. Wallace, Miss Shiela Marryatt, Miss Jessie F. Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald W. Pearson, Mrs. S. Tupper Bigelow, Miss Ruth Short, Miss Gertrude Hyndman, Miss Gwen Mullett, Miss Winnifred Marshall, Dr. W. G. Hardy, Mr. James Adam, Mr. Thomas Dalkin, Mr. Louis Hyndman, Mr. Alan Harvey, Mr. A. H. Dyde, Mr. G. M. Bullock, Mr. Frank Holroyd, Mr. F. N. Johnson, Mr. G. M. Bullock, and Mr. T. D. Grant.

Mlle. Levesque Gives Sparkling Paper On Contemporary Life

A lecture by Mlle. E. Levesque under the auspices of Les Dames de Saint-Joachim was enjoyed by a large audience in St. Joachim's parish hall on Monday evening.

"A Few Glimpses of Contemporary Life" was the subject of Mlle. Levesque's paper, which was sparkling with humor and a masterpiece of literature.

In this short report it is impossible to do justice to Mlle. Levesque's fine lecture, and it is to be hoped that at a not too distant date she may repeat it for the benefit of those who were not able to be present.

The pleasing musical program consisted of two vocal solos by Mlle. Roaugiers, accompanied by Mlle. Nichols at the piano, and two piano selections by Mlle. Charlotte Barry.

Mme. Petitclerc presided and introduced the speaker, Mlle. Levesque, of whom she said "books were her best friends," which would be proven before the close of the evening.

In the name of those present M. Paul Jenvrin in a few well-chosen words thanked Mlle. Levesque for her splendid paper and the artists for the excellent musical program.

Russian Women Given Same Standing as Men Says Miss Teskey

French Teacher Gives Birdseye View on Land of Soviets

"Un Coup d'Oeil Sur la Russie" was the subject of a charming address given by Miss Kathleen Teskey at a meeting of Le Cercle Francais of the University of Alberta on Wednesday afternoon. Miss Teskey recently returned from a trip abroad, in which her itinerary included Russia.

Russia, the land of the Soviets, is a country different from all others, stated Miss Teskey. Its people have their own national characteristics. These characteristics are essentially of the Russian people, and could not be mistaken for traits of another nation.

In telling of her trip, Miss Teskey said that upon reaching New York, she and her companion had nearly been persuaded to give up the idea of going to Russia, with Germany as an alternative, owing to the difficulty of obtaining visas. However, after a visit to the Russian consul, Russia was decided upon.

Absence of the Aristocracy

As regards the Russian people themselves, they give the impression of a people having great confidence. They walk about the streets as though they owned them. Noticeable was the complete absence of the artistocracy. Everywhere one can see the common people, but never any of the old artistocracy for which Russia was at one time so famed. The commoners are clothed in simple fashion, gay of appearance, yet nevertheless showing a certain degree of solicitude. The family as a unit is very much in evidence. Anywhere one can see family groups amusing themselves.

Physical Culture Popular

Great care is taken of the health of the inhabitants. Physical culture in all its forms is very popular. Infants in particular are cared for, as they are the coming men and women of the race. Parents are given instruction on the proper care of children.

The equality of men and women is an outstanding feature of Russian politics. If a woman has the ability, she is placed in the same sphere as a man. She may have a political career on equal terms with men.

The communistic system of Russia is the essential feature of its national government. Propaganda against the religion of the old regime is also felt on every side. It is interesting to note that the government has organized the large factories on the American system.

Palaces Are Beautiful

Concerning the outward symbols of the Russian civilization, there are many beautiful structures. These are, for the most part, the buildings of the old regime. Palaces beyond all description are existent. One of these, that of Catherine the Great, rivals in its beauty the Versailles of Louis XIV. The Palace of Nicolas II contains among other treasures, a superb tapestry representing Marie Antoinette. Marvellous fountains were an outstanding feature of the Palace of Peter the Great.

In closing, Miss Teskey pointed out the work being done by the government to ameliorate the life of the peasants, showing that the difficulty is not one of a question of the classes, but of the will to work.

Alberta Avenue

The Alberta Avenue Community league held the usual weekly whist drive and dance in St. Faith's hall on Wednesday evening, when prize winners were Mrs. M. Cross, Mrs. E. Scott, Mrs. H. Gale, Mrs. J. Richardson, Mr. Henry Walker, Mr. Eddie LeRoy, Mr. J. Holmes and Mr. B. Dickson.

Brilliant Crystal Ball Is Society Event Of Wednesday

Smart Dance at Glenora Marks Opening of Winter Season

The winter social season formally opened on Wednesday evening when Glenora Club was en fete for the Crystal ball. Silvery blue shaded bulbs cast a strange and lovely light over the long club room, through the windows of which could be seen the recently made rink, reflecting the gleam of hundreds of colored lights. Stars twinkled above the heads of the dancers and a shining white moon could be glimpsed above the archestra dais. Slender icicles hanging about, and a number of decorated Christmas trees completed the decorations.

Hostesses of the affair, which was a charming prelude to the skating season at the club, were Mrs. William Griesbach, Mrs. Sidney Maddocks, Miss Egbert, Mrs. Neil D. MacLean, Mrs. J. B. Starky, Mrs. W. W. Astle, Mrs. Forrester Macdonald, Mrs. Robert Graves, Mrs. Lee Williams, Mrs. Earl Hardisty, and Miss Phyllis Primrose. Noticeable on this occasion were the number of new members of the younger married set who are joining the social ranks of the city this year, from other cities. Many guests at the Roscoe-Kirkpatrick wedding came on to the affair.

Among those in attendance were Mrs. William Griesbach, Miss Egbert, Dr. Leslie Williamson, Mr. Alan Fetch, Mr. Ted Day, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bowman, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Higinbotham, Mr. Abe Donnelly, Mr. and Mrs. Marples, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Magnassen, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Dick, Dr. and Mrs. Morton Hall, Dr. and Mrs. R. T. Washburn, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Dinning, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Biggs, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Cunningham, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pike, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Allingham, Mr. and Mrs. James Graham, Mrs. E. C. May, Mrs. H. E. Hardisty, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Harvie, Mrs. A. Stuart Matheson, Miss Dorothy Kinney, Mr. and Mrs. William Wilkin, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Tysoe, Dr. Gerard Chapelle, Mrs. J. L. Juhlin, Mrs. James C. Thompson, Miss Marjorie Barford.

Dr. and Mrs. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Starky, Mr. McClung, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Patteson, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Williams, Mr. Neil Primrose, Miss Evelyn Jackson, Miss Allison Ponton, Miss Carolina Trowbridge, Miss Margaret Archibald, Miss Francois Blais, Miss Jean Henwood, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Maddocks, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Huff, Mr. Pat Ponton, Mr. John Sydie, Miss Doris Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Laverty, Dr. and Mrs. McDonald.

Sub-Normal Child To Be Considered

Dr. J. S. Wright presided at a meeting of a special committee of the Canadian Social Hygiene council on Wednesday evening in the Macdonald hotel, when arrangements were made for a public meeting to be held early in December at which the acute and increasing problem of the sub-normal child will be considered.

Special speakers who have made a study of this question will give the result of their investigations and there will be ample time allowed for discussion.

School teachers and others who, through the nature of their work are brought into close contact with this problem, are especially invited to attend this meeting, which will be held on Monday evening, December 16, in the Macdonald hotel.

BEAUTY QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Reducing Double Chin, Hips and Abdomen

Dear Miss Leeds—How may I reduce a double chin? (2) I am 17 years old, 5 feet 3 inches tall and weigh 126 pounds. Am I overweight? (3) I have large hips and abdomen. Please give me a few exercises to reduce them? (4) Is it all right to use witch-hazel after removing cleansing cream? My skin is inclined to be oily. (5) I use a vanishing cream before powdering. Is it suitable for my skin? JANET H.

Answer—You may reduce your double chin by daily exercise and the practice of correct posture when sitting, standing or walking. (2) You are a few pounds over the average weight for your age and height. You should weight between 118 and 124 pounds. It is better for a girl of your age to be a little overweight than underweight. Take more active exercise, especially outdoor sports such as hiking, swimming or tennis. Your figure will adjust itself if you keep your muscles in good working order. Walk from three to five miles every day.

Dancing, skipping, swimming and walking are splendid exercises for reducing the hips and abdomen. Here are a few exercises that you may take every night and morning regularly: (a) To improve your throat line, throw your head back between your shoulders. Let it roll from side to side several times. Turn your head first to the right and then to the left several times. Now massage the throat and neck muscles with a deep pinching movement. (b) To reduce the hips: Lie on your back on the floor. Elevate both legs to a vertical position with hips raised off the floor. Kick vigorously upward with each leg ten to twenty times. Raise and lower the legs to the floor, keeping your knees stiff. Repeat ten to twenty times. Raise and lower each leg alternately ten to twenty times.

(c) To reduce the abdomen: Lie on your back on the floor. Brace your toes under a heavy piece of furniture. Slowly raise yourself to a sitting position. Rest a moment or two, then slowly lower your trunk backward. Repeat five to ten times. Stand up and, keeping the knees stiff, raise the arms over your head and bend over from the waist, touching your toes with finger tips. Repeat ten to twenty times. When you can do this exercise easily touch the floor with the palm of the hands and walk forward on all fours around the room, keeping your knees stiff.

(4) Witch-hazel is a mild, soothing astringent and may be used after removing cream from your face.

(5) Vanishing cream is suitable for your type of skin. Very little is needed as a foundation base for your powder. Too much of any foundation cream will keep the face powder from going on smoothly. LOIS LEEDS.

Naturally Curly Hair Getting Dry

Dear Miss Leeds—My hair is naturally curly, but to make the waves more distinct I wet my hair with water every morning. Is this injurious? My hair seems to be getting dry. B. L. S.

Answer—As your hair seems to be getting dry, I rather suspect that you are using too much hard water on it. There is no harm in steaming the hair or using water to set a wave, but if you notice that the hair is getting too dry (as yours evidently is) then I suggest that you use one tablespoonful of olive oil in your last rinsing water after your shampoo. Give the scalp a warm oil treatment before the shampoo. Be sure to brush your hair and massage your scalp daily. Twice a week moisten the fingertips in warm oil and massage the scalp thoroughly. If your hair appears dry after the shampoo, use a few drops of brilliantine to make it soft and pliable. Do not wet the hair more than once a week to set the waves. If you hold your hair near the steam from the tea kettle and let it get thoroughly steamed you will find that your hair can easily be arranged in waves if it is naturally curly. LOIS LEEDS.

Large-Boned Type

Miss J. M. D.—You weigh about ten or fifteen pounds more than the average weight for a girl of your age and height. But as you say you are large boned I suspect that is the reason. Your proportions are good and at your age you should not try any reducing diets to get rid of the few extra pounds. Of course, you can avoid overeating and cut down on rich pastries and sweet desserts. Eat raw fruit instead.

(2) The sample of hair that you inclosed is a very pretty shade of light brown with just a tinge of gold in it. If I were you I would not worry about its turning red. It is natural for your shade of hair to have a few red and gold tints in it.

(3) If you remove the hair from your legs with a good depilatory the growth will not be increased. However, if you continue to shave it off it is quite likely to grow in coarser and thicker. LOIS LEEDS.

CLOTHES FOR SOUTHERN TRAVELING

What minimum outfit should a girl take for a coast-to-coast "suitcase trip" via the Panama Canal? She is to leave her Northern home early in January, and expects to return in March.

Miss T. should wear a wool crepe, tweed or jersey ensemble under her winter coat when leaving the north. Arrived in the south, the warm clothing is packed away for the homecoming journey, and light summer attire is worn. A dancing frock, a dinner gown, a sports silk ensemble for deck wear and an uncrushable crepe dress for train travel may be packed into a suitcase, together with extra shoes, etc.

Last summer's white felt hat and coat and white shoes may be worn in the tropics; a beret or a velvet helmet and brown suede pumps will be comfortable on the train. One pair of evening slippers will suffice; a dinner jacket will do for an evening wrap. Toilet articles may be carried in the small handbag.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The Contented Child Seldom Steals

One of my readers advances an interesting point with regard to petty stealing when she says that it is frequently because of a desire to be popular that the youngster steals. It has been found that if we run down the causes of persistent stealing in a child we almost always find that he is unhappy in his home or unable to keep up with his associates. This doesn't mean that he doesn't have the same amount of money to spend. All of us have to associate with persons who are much more prosperous financially. But a child does need something to be proud of, something that he can do, or be, or have that makes him feel his equality with his associates.

If a child is physically puny and can't be a champion runner or skater or the best pitcher on the vacant lot, he will usually try for scholastic honors. Failing to gain honors of any kind, he may seek distinction by bad behavior, bad associations or anything at all which will make him stand out as an individual from his fellows. We can understand better, then, why children who cannot meet the competition of physically or mentally superior children often develop into bullies or rise to noticeable proportions by liberal spending or treating.

The parent can help the child best by understanding what lies behind the impulse to steal. There are children who steal for the pleasure of getting the best of someone, but there must be an inferior emotion preceding this desire, or there must be sheer dislike for the person victimized. Instead of scolding and shaming the child, the parent should try to look at stealing merely as a symptom, an impulse that satisfies some unrecognized craving. Then he should find out what that craving is. Here is the experience of a mother:

"I have just read what you told a mother about her boy's tendency to steal, and I wanted to tell you that I had the same trouble and my boy is coming out nicely. He not only took money, but he gave it away when I tried to make him an allowance. He proved that he wanted to be a 'hail fellow well met' and please others. In fact, he showed the early signs of the disposition which at present is developing into courtesy and charm.

"Your advice was right as far as it went. I did see that his health was all right, for sometimes adenoids and tonsils, ears, other physical defects may be causing the trouble. Children don't look ahead and I think it is often because of their desire to be popular that starts the stealing habit. If they have a collection of some kind which they can show off, that will help. If you take an interest with them, you will be surprised how it will rejuvenate yourself. If possible give singing or music or elocution lessons and be glad they want to amount to something. Don't be too pointed in any of your lectures and keep his confidence and love. In order to do that one must not be severe on his sins. None of us is perfect and none of us has the same temptations. I always read your column." Z

Answer

My readers help me a lot, and your letter is full of wise and worth-while advice. In treating any subject, though, one must always remember the limitations of the space and that I can't possibly say in one article everything that is to be said on a subject as big as stealing.

Girl Didn't Know "Farmer" Was The Minister of Health

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—Now it may be told, as writers of memoirs say. Enough time has elapsed so that no one's feelings will be hurt.

It happened during the recent Canadian National exhibition. Two men, a tall one and a short one, were talking quietly before a booth in the Ontario government health department's section. The young lady in charge overheard part of a remark.

"I beg your pardon?" said she. "I heard you mention health education. I am intensely interested in health education."

"Oh, I was just remarking that health education should be so simple that even dumb people like my friend Dr. Gordon Bates here, and myself, can understand it," the big man replied gently.

"Oh, Dr. Bates isn't dumb," the girl replied. "I know that because I've heard him lecture. But—" her eyebrows lifted— "of course I don't know anything about you. What is your line?"

"I'm a farmer and proud of it," the big man said.

It was some time before the alert young lady learned that the farmer was the Honorable Dr. Forbes Godfrey, minister of health for Ontario.

Cars at Motor Show Most Exquisite Yet

Canadian Press

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Olympia was a blaze of color when the motor show was opened to the public. "This is easily the most exquisite show of motor cars I have seen," said a motor expert to the Daily Sketch. He had exhibited at the Crystal Palace and Manchester in the old days before Olympia had become the Mecca of motorists.

He explained that he used the word "exquisite" because the colors, the adornments, and the refinements of the 1930 car were obviously a bait for the women motorist.

To mere man the vivid coloring of the coach bodies was in some cases even "gaudy." There was one vermilion that ought to carry a "dimming" device in the interests of users of the road. Very soon there was a woman at the wheel of every limousine, a woman studying the working of every engine, a woman engaging the attention of every official. Finger-tip controls, sunshine roofs, the dinkiest of lampshades for the interior of the car—what more could a woman desire? The Maharajah of Alwar spent most of the morning at the show with country squires, their vicars, foreign experts, and people from all parts of the country.

Artist Deplores Passing of Old Toronto Houses

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 28.—Many who sigh over the passing of old houses that are beautiful in themselves as well as links with local history, will agree with Thoreau MacDonald, the artist, who writes in the "Forum" of the destination of an old house built in the best tradition at the corner of Bedford Road and Bloor street, in this city. "It will make widened Bloor street more dreary than ever. It seems to me that old house with its silver poplars, maples and lilacs, was the most interesting building on the street, more so to me than the museum of Queen's Park Plaza. The museum is full of Chinese and European objects and will probably be enlarged to hold more of them, while fine Canadian things, really part of our country, are given over to the wreckers."

SAGGING FLOORS

If your floors have sagged, you can cover the cracks either by moving the molding down a little on the baseboards or else buying wider moldings to cover them up. Either improves the appearance.

LEFT-OVER POTATO

Mix one cup of left-over potato with two tablespoons of tapioca, one cup cooled, scalded milk, two teaspoons grated cheese, one cup crumbs and one slightly beaten egg, mold into croquettes and fry in deep fat.

SKIRTED DIGNITY

A stunning black panne velvet gown with real lace yoke that points out over the shoulders and to a V in front has tremendous dignity in its long skirt that sweeps the ankles all around.

PINE CONES

One of the nicest Sunday night supper attractions in the world is a crackling pine cone fire in the fireplace. The children can gather cones on their hikes. The Christmas tree should be saved for this use, too.

Burt McConnell Tells of His Second Journey to the Moose Country

Writer Forced to Work Hard to Land This Wounded Bull With Camera

Blood-Spattered Trail Followed For Many Miles

Adventurer Gets Photographs of This Moose at Distance of 40 and 50 Yards—Light Was Better on This Occasion and McConnell Took His Time

(Editor's Note—Moose again! The "Modern Cave-man" has had another stroke of luck. This time he gets on the trail of one which has been wounded and hunts him down—with his camera. It took some wily work on the part of Burt McConnell to land this one. Nothing like his first attempt, when the young bull was consumed by curiosity and virtually ran into the camera. This one was bent on saving his life and McConnell explains how he finally came up with him).

ON THE BEAR-TRAP LAKE (Quebec) Indian Trail, Nov. 17.—(By Courier to Normandin)—Impelled by that intangible something which draws a murderer back to the scene of his crime, and favored by the same good weather indications that preceded my first visit to the big river to the westward, I set out again for the moose country on the 13th—which is my lucky day. And so it proved, for this time I obtained photographs of another moose.

Not at 50 feet, to be sure; such an opportunity comes but once in a lifetime of the man who hunts with the camera. But at approximately 40 yards and 50 yards.

HAD PLENTY OF TIME

And I really got him this time; on the other occasion I was obliged to use by telephoto lens for the first shot, so the moose undoubtedly was out of focus. But this time the light was better and I had plenty of time, for the moose stood still in the water, and climbed slowly up the bank of the big river. For he was wounded, when he walked he lifted his left hind foot like a horse afflicted with "string-halt." Besides, I had been following his blood-spattered trail for miles. It happened in this way:

After a temperature of 16 degrees below freezing, more than three inches of snow, a hail storm while the sun was shining brightly, a salmon-colored mackerel sky at sunset (I know this sounds fishy, but it happened) and two snowstorms while the sun beamed down upon the Washimeska this freakish Quebec weather decided to put on another show. So it rained for two days, steadily and copiously with a proportionate rise in temperature of about twenty degrees. As a result, the snow in the open places disappeared.

This, I thought to myself, is the best—and perhaps the last—chance I shall have to re-visit the moose country. The weather can't possibly get another program under way in less than three days! And so it proved; there were two days of perfect autumn weather; a misty, overcast day, and

STORE LOOTED, CHICKEN COOP CLEARED OUT

Man Charged With Arson Makes Appearance Today

Crime was quiet over Wednesday night, only six arrests being made by the police, while two chicken coops and a candy store were looted. The arrests were: one drunk, Robt. Wightman, charged with causing a disturbance; Peter Henry Dyke, vagrancy, Dymtro Didyk, alias Zelinsky, theft; Henry Stump, charged with arson by the provincial police. He was brought into the cells from the country for trial by Magistrate G. B. McLeod.

A total of eight hens were taken from the chicken coops of Mike Pisasky, 12115 65 street, and Mrs. E. Nazariwitz, 12202 67 street.

George Papas, who keeps a confectionary store at 10273 101 street, reports that candy to the value of around $4 was taken by thieves who forced an entrance through the back of the store.

Victor McCallum now claims that he wasn't held up; simply accosted by a pair of hoboes who asked for money. He told reporters that he had been held up, yesterday.

Alberta Exhibitors For Chicago Show

Fortyfive Alberta exhibitors will be represented at the Chicago International Show which will open on Saturday and will continue until December 7, according to information received on Thursday by H. A. Craig deputy minister of agriculture, from F. S. Grisdale, principal of the Olds School of Agriculture, who is at Chicago arranging the exhibits

Many of the livestock entries which showed at Toronto will proceed to Chicago, although just which or the number are not yet known.

The grain exhibits to be shown at Chicago will be entirely different from those shown at Toronto, as it has always been the policy of the exhibitors to send a different assortment to the two shows.

FEW CASES OF 'FLU IN CITY

Edmonton Appears To Have Escaped Dread Disease This Year

Few cases of influenza exist in the city at the present time and there appears to be no evidence of a repetition of last year's influenza epidemic, according to an opinion expressed by Dr. R. B. Jenkins, medical health officer, Thursday. About this time last year thousands of cases of influenza and some deaths were reported in Edmonton, in common with other centres throughout the world. This year Edmonton appears to have escaped the disease. Dr. Jenkins explained that influenza was not a disease which required reporting to the health department, but pointed out that should an epidemic appear, the health department would be the first to hear about it.

In regard to chickenpox, which had reached epidemic proportions during the past few weeks, as many as 100 new cases being reported in a single week, Dr. Jenkins said he thought the disease was now dying out

CONFESSES TO SETTING FIRE

Tried to Burn Down Shack For Furniture Insurance

Confessing to Magistrate G. B. McLeod, in city police court Thursday, that he had attempted to burn down the house situated at 11840 88 street, in which he was a tenant, Thos. H. Stump was given six months in jail on a charge of arson.

Stump said that the furniture in the rented house was owned by himself, and that it was insured for $1,500. It was to get this money that he had started a fire by placing some rolls of wallpaper against a basement door and setting a match to them.

S. T. Bigelow, crown prosecutor, explained that Stump had been out of work for some time, and that there was sickness in the home.

"You are getting off easily; this is a serious offence," his worship commented, when he passed sentence.

Investigations which led to Stump's arrest were carried out by J. J. Nicholson, of the provincial fire commissioner's department; Jack Booth, fire marshal with the Edmonton fire department, and W. P. Walker, of the Underwriters' Investigation Bureau.

Aero Club Will Gather Tonight

A large turn-out of members is expected at the annual meeting of the Edmonton and Northern Alberta Aero club, to be held in the Prince of Wales armories at 8 p.m. tonight.

Election of officers for the coming year will be held, while questions in regard to the municipal airport will also be dealt with.

Judgment was reserved by the appeal court on Thursday in the appeal of plaintiff in the action of Madeleine Margaret McEwan vs. the North American Life Assurance Co. The action had originally been brought about over the lapsing or re-instatement of a policy for about $2,000 on plaintiff's deceased husband. The case was dismissed by the trial judge. Col. F. C Jamieson, K.C., appeared for the appellant, and C. F. Newell, K.C., for respondent

With no evidence to place before a jury, the killing of Herbert Atkins, aged painter, struck down by a hit-and-run driver three weeks ago, is still a mystery and the inquest on Atkins was adjourned until December 6

Diseased Fish Are Sold in Edmonton

MAY DEVELOP FT. M'MURRAY SALT DEPOSITS

Large Canadian Financial Concern May Undertake Extensive Work

Extensive developments of the Fort McMurray salt deposits on provincial government property, may be undertaken by a large and influential Canadian financial organization known as Canadian Industries, Ltd., if a conference between Premier J. E. Brownlee and A. B. Purvis, managing director of the financial concern, arranged for Friday, reaches fruition

Canadian Industries, Ltd., is the controlling factor of the Canadian Salt Company, of Windsor, Ont., which organization last year made overtures to the government for development of the McMurray deposits, through its president, Sir Thomas Tait. These proposals were rejected by the government, mainly on the ground that concessions asked for were such as no other industry in the province had ever obtained and which, if granted, would, amount to a suggestion of favoritism.

Since that time and believing in the worth of the northern field, both the government and the Canadian Industries have sought a solution of the matter. Considerable correspondence has passed between the two and when Sir Charles Gordon, a vice president of the Bank of Montreal was here in September as a member of the party of E. W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, he conferred with Premier Brownlee on the matter and the result was an arrangement whereby Mr. Purvis would come here for a conference.

There is reason to hope that some extensive plan of development will result from the discussion.

Bulls-Eyes

A poultry show will be held in the market building, January 27 to 31, the necessary permission having been given by the city commissioners, Commissioner David Mitchell announced Thursday.

Graham Spry, national secretary of the Association of Canadian Clubs, Ottawa, will be the guest and speaker at the Canadian Club luncheon in the Macdonald hotel, Friday, November 29, at 12:30 p.m. The subject of Mr. Spry's address is "Some Distinctive Canadian Characteristics."

United States citizens in Edmonton, including vice-consul Odin G. Loren, will make "whoopee" on Thursday, Nov. 28, which has been proclaimed a National Holiday by President Hoover. The vice-consular office will be closed all day.

Equipped with a new 300 horsepower Wright engine, the Commercial Airways Lougheed Vega took off from Los Angeles airport for Salt Lake City, Utah, today on the first lap of its journey to the city. A. McMullen is at the controls.

Collapsing just as he carried some packages from an express truck into the basement of the Liggett Drug Store, Devit Stotts, 70, 10170 104 street, died where he fell. Examination showed that the old man had died of heart disease. No inquest will be held.

The Public library is indebted to Henderson Directories, Lt., for 1929 issues of directories of the following cities: Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw North Battleford, Prince Albert. These will be a welcome addition to the file of reference directories now available for use of the public Skidding when he tried to brake his car on the icy street at the 109 street and 87 avenue intersection, at 9.10 a.m. on Thursday, when a street car stopped in front of him, Geo. Coward, 11325 96 street, knocked down Margaret Shore, a pupil at Garneau school. The girl had one foot slightly injured.

Mr. Justice Frank Ford on Thursday, in the supreme court, began the hearing of an action for $9,825 brought by James Gilbert Ross against John Jackson in respect to the sale of a block of property. The case is continuing. A. B. Macdonald is acting for plaintiff, and J. N. McDonald for defendant.

Five Edmonton taxi drivers have had their licenses cancelled for offenses in contravention of the new taxicab by-law, according to a list received by Mayor A. U. G. Bury Thursday from the deputy provincial secretary. In addition, three outside taxi drivers have had their licenses cancelled for offenses of which they were convicted in the Edmonton police court.

Western Canada Airways is now registered with the provincial registrar of joint stock companies, according to documents filed by Stanley C S. Kerr, of Tighe & Kerr, Edmonton is now the main office of the company west of Winnipeg, and the registered offices of the company are in the Jas. Richardson building. Le Roy Mattern continues to act as the company's agent in Edmonton.

Suit for damages and costs totalling $651 was filed in the supreme court on Thursday by Catherine Janet MacDonnell and Jessie B. Jordan against Steve Pech and F. R. Lovette The case arose out of an accident on Sept. 11 last at the corner of 116 street and 104 avenue, when a taxi owned and operated by Pech collided with a truck owned and operated by Lovette, inflicting injuries to plaintiffs. Macdonald, Weaver and Steer are acting for plaintiffs

Board Of Health To Take Action; Warn Consumers

Fish Are Really Tullibees Susceptible to Parasites—Closely Resemble Whitefish, Say Ichthyologists

Diseased fish, or fish that are highly susceptible to disease, have been sold widely in the city as whitefish and steps are being taken by Board of Health officials to put a stop to this practice, it was revealed by Dr. R. B. Jenkins, city medical health officer, Thursday.

The fish in question are tullibees which strongly resemble whitefish and have been found to be diseased in a large proportion. Department of Fisheries authorities are co-operating with city health officials in an effort to prevent these fish from being sold to consumers as whitefish or "T" whitefish as certain fish markets are reported to have disguised them.

TORONTO EXPERTS CONFIRM SUSPICION

Consumers are warned to make sure it is real white fish they are purchasing as experts have found that tullibees are subject to a parasite which abounds in northern lakes and attacks these fish.

Samples of tullibees taken from city fish markets have been sent to Toronto ichthyologists who have confirmed the belief that they were diseased, but so far this disease has not been diagnosed.

Fisheries experts state that while tullibees strongly resemble whitefish they are a distinct breed and not a cross between a whitefish and some other type.

ANOTHER MAN HELD UP BY LONE BANDIT

Henry Carter Confronted by Thug at Gates of Cemetery

Sudden death, in more senses than one, stared Henry Carter, C.N.R. employee, in the face, Wednesday night when an armed bandit with a nickle-plated revolver of large calibre, held Carter up at the gates of the Edmonton cemetery.

According to the story Carter told to the squad of police who raced to the scene of the hold-up when the alarm was given, he was riding a bicycle to work, along 107 avenue, at 10.15 p.m., when he was confronted by the thug

"Stick 'em up!" rasped the bandit giving emphasis to the remarks by jabbing his weapon in the pit of Carter's stomach.

Holding the gun against Carter's body with one hand, the robber deftly emptied his victim's pockets, unearthing a watch, a flashlight and a package of cigarettes.

After examining the booty with the captured light, the bandit returned Carter's belongings, and told him to be on his way

Carter leaped on to his bicycle and left the vicinity of the robber and the cemetery as quickly as possible.

HELD UP BY ARMED THUGS

T. W. Hird Dragged Out of Auto, But Succeeds in Escaping

Battling with a brace of armed bandits who tried to drag him out of his car at a late hour Monday night, T W. Hird, 8107 81 street, emerged victorious from the encounter after one of the bandits had dragged him out of his auto

As Hird was driving up the Connor's Hill road, he was stopped by a man who stepped out into the glare of the headlights and signalled for the car to halt.

The bandit then leaped on to the running board of the car and thrust a six-shooter through the window as Hird turned down the window, ordering Hird to stick 'em up and get out on to the road.

Hird grappled with the robber and hurled him into the ditch. As he started his car again, another man jumped on to the running board, but was thrown to the ground by the jolting of the car

FIREMEN RISK LIVES; DARING DASH SUCCEEDS

Save Clarke Block at 95th Street and Alberta Avenue

Defying death in a daring dash through the dark of five o'clock this morning over streets slippery with ice, firemen from Halls One, Five and Seven saved the hardware and dry goods store of J. J. Clarke, 9503 118 avenue, from going up in smoke when fire broke out in the basement of the store from an overheated furnace pipe at 4:55 a.m., according to the police report.

The damage was not extensive, the fire being confined to the basement where some of the woodwork was burned. Mr. Clarke had not yet made any estimate of the total loss, but it is covered by insurance.

Improve Service On 102 Ave. Stub Line

In order to prevent hardship to passengers transferring from the blue and blue and white lines to the 102 avenue stub line, a signal will be installed which will flash and notify the motorman on the 102 avenue car of any approaching blue or blue and white car. The schedule on the 102 avenue line gives but one car every 20 minutes and frequently passengers will just reach the transfer point as the car leaves the east end of the line.

Instructions have also been given to all motormen by Superintendent W. J. Cunningham to watch for transfer passengers, especially during cold weather, and improve service as much as possible.

Divorce Granted By Mr. Justice Ford

Sitting in the supreme court on Thursday, Mr. Justice Frank Ford granted a decree nisi in the action for divorce instituted by John Charles Bridges against his wife Gladys Clara Bridges. The decree is to become absolute after a three months' stay. Custody of the three children of the marriage were given to plaintiff. The action was not defended. White and Harrison appeared for plaintiff.

Choose Delegates To Address Meet

Delegates from the junior section of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce will address a meeting of the Wetaskiwin Board of Trade Monday A meeting of the junior section will be held Thursday night to decide who the delegates will be. Ways and means of inducing all electors to exercise their franchise at the coming civic elections will also be discussed

INSURANCE OF LIVERY AUTOS RECOMMENDED

May Enact Legislation to Make Taxis Carry Public Liability

On the recommendation of the Minister of Public Works, the government is considering the enactment of legislation whereby every livery and taxi motor car must be covered with public liability insurance covering accident and death to one or more persons and property damage, according to Premier J. E. Brownlee

It is recommended to the government that before any livery and taxi licenses are issued next year that each car must be insured for public liability in respect to the injury or death of one person to the extent of $2,500; for injury or death to more than one person to the extent of $3,000, and for property damage to the extent of $1,000.

At the last session of the legislature an amendment to the Vehicle and Highway Traffic Act was passed, empowering the government to make regulations for licensing of liverymen and taxi drivers and as part of such regulations to require each liveryman or taxi driver to insure each vehicle with a policy.

The recommendation from the Public Works Department specifically states the amounts of insurance thought desirable.

Commenting on the recommendation, Premier Brownlee stated that the government recognized on the one side that the amounts suggested are smaller than required in other provinces of the Dominion or in sections of the United States, the usual being $5,000 and $10,000 respectively for the one person and more than one person injury or death items.

On the other hand, the question is whether there is sufficient livery and taxi traffic to warrant payment of premiums on the higher amounts.

The government is writing Chambers of Commerce and the Alberta Motor Association for an expression of views and will welcome comment from organizations or individuals interested

In the meantime the Act in question has been transferred, on authority of the executive council, from the public works to the provincial secretary's department, in which all Acts dealing with motor vehicles and licensing are consolidated.

Tells Of Advance Made By Aviation In North Canada

The vast strides made by aviation in the northland and the resultant benefit that Edmonton will draw from this, was stressed by Capt. Jas Bell, of the Edmonton and Northern Alberta Aero Club, speaking at the weekly Optimist Club luncheon held in the Macdonald hotel on Thursday. Denny McLean, president, was in the chair.

While two years ago, there was only $12,000 invested in aviation in Edmonton, there will be $2,250,000 tied up in aircraft and equipment by the end of next week, Capt. Bell said. He was heartily applauded.

Some lucky Edmonton boy will go to the International Optimist convention in Erie, Pa., next July, to compete against boys from other Optimist clubs on the continent, in a Junior Oratorical contest sponsored by the club. Boys from the boy scouts and kindred organizations will be eligible and elimination contests for this competition will be staged in the city through the winter, Bill Bailey announced.

Three new members—J. W. Hill, city telephone department; Wm. J. Rose, Hayward Lumber company, and Harold A. McNab, Imperial Oil company—were welcomed by the club members

Two fine solos were sung by Ed. McGarvey.

Conservative M.P. For Essex In Town

En route to the north and the Pacific coast, Eccles J. Gott, Conservative M.P. for Essex county, Ontario, the most southerly riding in Canada was a visitor in the city Thursday and was registered at the Macdonald hotel. Mr. Gott defeated Hon. George P. Graham, former minister of railways, in 1925.

In regard to Edmonton and district Mr. Gott declared he was amazed at the growth and progress of the city made since he last visited here eight or nine years ago.

Ratepayers Will Meet This Evening

Residents of the south side are invited to the annual south side ratepayers meeting, which will be held in the Strathcona Library Thursday at eight p.m. Commissioner David Mitchell, Mayor A. U. G. Bury, A. T Cushing, chairman of the public school board, and members of the city council will attend to present the report of the year's administration and progress.

Call It What You Like, 'Tis Just a Turnip

"Speaking of brassica campestris, how's this for a world beater? Just get an eyeful of that esculent root," remarked A. I. Cameron of R.R. 5, Edmonton, as he staggered into the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce office Thursday morning with a huge vegetable. "Dunno, looks like a turnip to me," replied John Blue, secretary, and other members of the staff confirmed his view which was correct enough, to use the common term for the product. This somewhat obese specimen of the turnip family was grown by Mr. Cameron and tipped the scale at 13 pounds. Mr. Cameron claims the world's championship for turnip growing. Incidentally, "Brassica" etc., is the botanical name for this particular type of turnip, and "esculetit" of the whole species.

APPEAL COURT ASKED TO RULE FOR PLAINTIFF

Says He Was Underpaid For Planning Coalspur Collieries

Chief Justice Horace Harvey and a full bench of the appeal court on Thursday commenced the hearing of the appeal of plaintiff in the action Leonard C. Stevens vs. Robert Spencer, Kenneth A. Blatchfard, Robert G. Grieve, W. Ross Alger and Alexander R. McLennan

The appeal is from a judgment of Mr. Justice Tweedie, dated Sept. 12 last, by which appellants claim for $1,998.66, was dismissed with costs

Appellant is a mining engineer with headquarters in this city. It was claimed that in 1927 the Coalspur Collieries prepared to open a mine on property near Edson and that appellant was asked by defendant Grieve in his capacity as managing director, to draw up plans and to assist generally in the opening of the mine.

Appellant's charges were to be on the basis of a yearly salary of $8,000 and although there was no agreement to this effect in writing, this is said to have been the understanding arrived at with Grieve.

Plans were drafted by appellant for a coal handling plant and power plant at the company's mine and he made various trips to North Edmonton, Vegreville and Lethbridge to inspect second hand plants and material the company was contemplating purchasing. In August of 1927 Grieve expressed the wish that appellant should take charge of the building of the plant a tthe mine again on the basis of a yearly salary of $8,000. He worked exclusively on this organization's plans from Sept. 1 to Dec. 9, 1927.

Some monies were paid and the amount claimed is for balance of services rendered.

The hearing is continuing.

A. F. Ewing, K.C., is appearing for appellant and Neil D. Maclean, K.C., and James H. Ogilvie for respondants.

Airfield Manager Not Yet Appointed

No decision has yet been made as to who will be appointed manager of the airfield, according to city officials. With the inauguration of mail service and installation of lighting it will be necessary to have a full time manager at the field and this appointment will be made shortly, it is expected.

A test of the beacon on the tower of the new hangar, now nearing completion, was made by Engineer A. W Haddow and William Barnhouse, superintendent of the electric light and power department, Thursday.

'VARSITY MAN LECTURES ON RECENT TRIP

Dr. Walker Attended American Chemical Society in Minneapolis

Dr. Walker, Head of the Department of Chemistry at the University, told the Chemical Society of his recent trip to Minneapolis to attend the meeting of the American Chemical Society.

He briefly touched on various incidents of his trip through the western provinces and the States, his trip taking in Chicago and returning via Milwaukee to Minneapolis. He confessed that he was surprised to see several fields of tobacco growing in Wisconsin.

While he was in Chicago the Graf Zeppelin had paid its visit to the city which is usually associated with gang war and Big Bill Thompson

The meetings of the Society were held in various lecture rooms and auditoriums of the University of Minnesota. A program of all the papers to be given was drawn up by the committee in charge, which, considering the number of the speakers, and the fact that several halls were in use at the same time was extremely necessary.

Over 12,000 members were in attendance. Several famous chemists from the Continent were present as guests of the Society, to present papers on certain pertinent subjects.

Of particular interest to the chemist was a paper delivered by Professor P. Bonhoeffer, on his work in proving that the gas hydrogen, regarded from the earliest days of chemical research up to the present as an element, was in reality a mixture of two gases. To prove and illustrate his theorem, he conducted an experiment before the eyes of his colleagues.

Possibly of more interest to the layman was the work of J. W. Herschey, in manufacturing synthetic diamonds. Improving on the work of his predecessors, Herschey had manufactured diamonds which satisfied the requirements of the United States Bureau of Standards. But alas—even his best example was so small that he had to have it mounted on a slide so as to permit it to be seen—with the aid of a microscope. "He hopes, however, to be soon manufacturing diamonds of a commercial size, and he will then start to fill the orders which are already coming to him."

Besides the lectures, the committee had arranged an excellent program for several of the evenings. Industrial trips were arranged and of these, Dr Walker was greatly impressed by the Ford Assembling Plant at St. Paul and the Pillsbury Flour Mills, reputed to be the largest in the world.

On his return trip he passed through the famous Iron Range, about 80 miles north of Duluth, which is the source of most of the iron ore used in North American smelters

His closing remarks were concerning the pulp and paper industry as he saw it in Minnesota. The mill which he visited turned out a very high quality product, and connected with it, were other mills, for the manufacture of wooden ware, from sawn lumber to toothpicks.

The picture story this week will be "The Water Babies." Besides this story with beautiful pictures loaned by the department of extension, there will also be "The Bad Man," "Leinas the Lucky," "The Wonderful Tale of Xigalea," and a Japanese story called "Butterfly Blossom." The hours are as usual, 4.30 on Friday, in the Central Library, and 10.30 on Saturday in Strathcona library.

Baging a moose apiece on hunt north of Peers, F. H. Hall and R. P. Strachota, of Killam, are registered at the Royal George en route to their homes with the steak and horns.

Everyone excepting employees of The Edmonton Bulletin may take part. As many from one family as you like.

Clip the picture and coupon underneath it every day and write the answer on blank line. Save all your clippings till the end of the contest, then send them in to the "Pictorial Canada" Puzzle Contest Editor of The Edmonton Bulletin in one batch, in a sealed envelope containing clearly written your name and address.

If any contestant is doubtful of the correct answer to any puzzle, he may send in several sets of answers, but each set must be complete, and in its own envelope containing all fifty clippings.

If two or more persons are tied for any prize, their prizes will be lumped and divided between them. The judges' decision will be final.

The first puzzle appeared Tuesday, October 29, and the Edmonton Bulletin will publish cartoons daily, continuing till Saturday, December 14. All envelopes containing answers must be in the hands of the contest editor not later than Saturday, December 21, so that out of town contestants may have the same opportunities of winning the big prize as those living in town. Winners will be announced and the prize distributed a day or two before Christmas.

This will be The Edmonton Bulletin's Christmas present to those of its readers who are bright enough to rank as winners.

"MISS PAT"

By ELENORE MEHERIN

Richard saw them at the French doors; saw their bewildered look. He straightened abruptly and, pretending to motion the chauffeur on, he hurried to the steps.

"Just dropped in for the week-end," he called, taking hold of the rail and smiling up at them. "Got lonely, girls!"

He stood for that moment, supporting himself against the rail, the sunlight falling on his flushed, upturned face.

Then they were greeting him, they were taking his coat, his grips, talking in soft, excited anxiety. So unexpected, he'd come. And so tired that way he walked across the patio.

Richard slumped in a chair by the fireplace. He grinned and pushed a hand over his forehead.

"Tired, yes. Light the fire, Pat. We start the new job, Tuesday. I've three days' grace."

His face had a hot, dusky color, and he breathed rapidly as though he'd been running. Now his eyes came anxiously to rest in Laura's.

Pat Shaking Hands To Blazing Logs

He was tired. That was all. Worked hard. And it was bitter up there. Got this shivering cold.

He put shaking hands out to the now blazing logs and sank low in the chair.

That hour with her father sitting before the crackling fire, his comely head resting against a pillow—not trying to bluff now; but taking the hot milk they brought him; letting them minister to him; clinging like a little boy to the comfort of their presence—that hour etched itself on Pat's heart in sweet, immortal pain.

It was a lull—a peace and beauty before the terror of the days that followed.

Late that evening Pat stood at the door with the doctor. He'd seen her father, had himself moved Richard's bed to the porch. Give him plenty of air—follow all these directions to the dot. The nurse would come later.

"Pat," said he, "why did you and your mother delay like this?"

The girl's heart bounded.

"Delay? We didn't."

"And was he up there alone these last three days?"

Pat nodded. She took hold of his sleeve and for a long moment stared mutely. Finally her voice came in a faint wisp. "But—isn't it only—a cold?"

'I Don't Want to Frighten You, but—'

"I don't want to frighten you. But your father needs all the care you can give him. You do as I've told you. And don't leave him alone a minute. If he grows delirious, it may take both you and your mother to hold him. Don't be alarmed. But be READY! Can't you be strong for your father, Pat?"

Again Pat nodded. She said softly: "I guess he has pneumonia."

"He has. And he should have been in bed all week—all last week."

Pat leaned against the door. Perfume exhaled from all the flowerbeds came dreamily up from the moonlit garden. She closed her eyes, aware of a terrible reluctance—a fear to go back upstairs—to return to her father's room.

On the threshold where they could see Richard's bed, Laura met her. Her mother had a strange, quiet look. She seemed taller and very white.

"He's sleeping," she murmured softly.

Then she took Pat's hand. It was like a command the way she held it.

"You saved Dickie, Pat. You are going to help me save your father. Now go in softly and sit near him. I'll be in the kitchen a few moments."

Pat heard her father cough—a dry, rasping cough. It frightened her.

She stepped into the room where the warm breeze faintly stirred the curtains.

Richard lay on his side, holding to it with both his hands. The flush on his cheeks was very dark now, and his mouth was drawn almost livid. He breathed harshly, the breath ending in groans. But the sandy curls went back so boyishly from his forehead.

Pat looked at these and at the little crows' feet about her father's eyes.

How Very Thin Her Father Was

He seemed flat and thin as he lay there with his face pressed against the pillows. She hadn't noticed how very thin he was. And never had she seen a bitter look about her father's gallant mouth before.

She recalled suddenly the tease and gaiety in his eyes as he sat in the car the day she drove him home. How he pulled the old overcoat up about him and settled down in its warmth.

And the glowing dream he had sketched—off on the marching seas—

He made a valiant effort to smile, but the look he turned on Pat was full of apprehension. It was almost a terrified glance. "Pain, Pat," he murmured—"awful pain here."

She put her hand on his. He seemed glad; seemed to want her there and holding to him. She said softly, but terribly overwrought when she heard those loud, noisy breaths of his: "I know, Dad . . . but mother's coming up stairs now and she'll put on some ice and you'll be better soon—in a very little while."

"Have to be—by Tuesday, Pat."

"You will."

She Moved in A Nightmare

She watched her mother leaning over the bed. Mechanically she followed Laura's orders. But as that leaden night drew to a close, Pat felt that she moved in a nightmare.

And the whole world was filled with the loud agony of her father's breathing.

"He's not better," she whispered to her mother.

"It will be five or six days to the crisis. Then he will be better."

"Not five or six days of this!"

Again Laura took her hands and again she said with that strange look of quiet—unearthly calm and quiet, "It will not seem long when we have him at peace again, Pat . . . You go now, dear, and rest."

"Not till the nurse comes."

"She is here now. . . ."

She would not have admitted how glad she was—how unutterably relieved to be out of that room; to be away from that bed where each hour her father's hands seemed hotter and his eyes grew ever more pitifully anxious and unsure—as though he were afraid.

She closed her door. She undressed slowly. Everything seemed gaunt and unreal.

Dickie came in. His black eyes squinted. He took a rough little hand and drove it through his hair.

"Dad's pretty sick, I guess. Why didn't you people tell me? Guess I coulda sat up with him."

"He'll be better."

"Gosh, you can hear him breathe in the hall. Say, I made the coffee. Want a cup?"

For no reason that Pat could explain this unnerved her—made the tears rush to her eyes. She sat on the bed and drank the coffee. Then Dickie said: "Well—I guess he'll be all right pretty soon then?"

Pat Nodded and Fell Asleep

Pat nodded. And she fell asleep. It was late in the afternoon that she awakened. She said to herself: "Five or six days."

But she was not prepared for the terror and fear of these five or six days.

She came in now. Richard didn't turn at the step. He seemed not to have moved. He was still holding to his side, but now his nostrils quivered with his breaths, and he said in jerks: "God—Lo—do something!"

And when her mother went from the room, he reached his hand along the bed. Pat covered it. He said: "Pat—done."

"Oh, Dad!"

"This pain . . . awful."

"You're Not Done Yet, Ole Sport"

She leaned down and called to him softly:

"You're not done, ole sport! You've got to take her on that trip, you know. You've just got to bear this a day or two. . . . You're better."

He looked up eagerly—ever so anxiously, as though he needed strength—as though he took comfort in her words. . . .

"That job—Pat—"

"Oh, that job! There's millions of jobs. For you—Dad—"

He nodded. "Stay—Pat—" He smiled.

This Slip Of A Girl "Slipped It Across"

Told Rich U.S. Social Climbers She Was Lady Jane Grey

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

PARIS, Nov. 28.—A slip of a girl, not yet out of her teens, with the innocent air of the typical English rosebud, has been having the time of her life in Paris at the expense of ambitious American social climbers.

The gentle English maiden "descended" at a hotel in the luxury quarter of Paris, and gave her name as Lady Jane Grey.

French hotel keepers cannot be expected to know that the lady of that name died on the scaffold many years ago. So they took this claimant to the title at her word.

It seems that Lady Jane had advertised freely in American papers offering her services to introduce into the most exclusive English society a limited number of Americans.

The replies had to be sent to a box number, but it was insisted that the advertiser must belong to one of the most exclusive social sets of the present day, and that for the right type of client she was in a position to guarantee introductions to royalty.

Applicants were given an appointment at the Paris hotel with "Lady Jane." And from her Paris headquarters she has carried on all through the summer, though she pointed out that it would not be possible to attend to the London end of the business until the winter. In the meantime she promised her clients a preliminary canter in good society with such English social lions as could be stalked on the continent.

She took parties of clients to Deauville and other resorts at the height of the season, and does seem to have done something to earn the high fees she exacted from her ambitious Americans, by introducing them to a few celebrities, to whom she had gained access by means of forged letters of introduction.

In other cases she appears to have bluffed the clients by passing off as famous social lions some of her own accomplices.

Since her return from Deauville she has been baiting the trap for her victims by means of elaborate social functions, and her dupes have been led to believe that at these gatherings they were meeting some of the bluest blood in England.

The matter has come under the notice of the police as the result of a mishap that arose through the generosity of an American, who was "touched" for a considerable sum by a "lord" he had met at one of these gatherings.

The American thought he would like his money back, so he looked up the peer whose name he had been given in "Tout Paris," and called at his Paris residence.

He was then astonished to find that the peer in question had not been in Paris for years and in fact is at the moment in East Africa!

But Lady Jane had evidently heard something, for she had left her hotel suite, and her present address is unknown.

Steel, Iron Output Here, $609,632,999

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—The output value of the iron and steel industry in Canada during 1928 was $609,632,999. More than $300,000,000 of this total was value added by manufacture. Revised dominion bureau of statistics figures gives the number of plants as 1,159, with a capital investment of $702,931,186. On the average 119,200 persons were employed with salaries and wages amounting to $168,320,038.

Feels Depression Of Prison Trade

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 28.—If the number of Swedish prisoners decrease at the present rate the kingdom will soon have a serious problem of unemployment of prison officials. Today there are only 1,950 persons in prisons throughout the whole country. Barberg, a prison built to accommodate 350 inmates, has during the last 15 years seldom had more than two or three prisoners at a time. The Engelholm prison that was built to hold 200 inmates has had only one guest during six months of the year, although two warders have been on duty throughout the year.

Fishermen Missing Thought To Be Dead

Canadian Press

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE Man., Nov. 28.—Missing for two days and last seen six miles from shore on the ice of Lake Manitoba, J. Hobal, fisherman, is believed to have been a victim of severe storms which swept the lake recently. Hobal left here Monday morning to inspect his fishing nets. He said he would return in an hour, but his friends believe he has either crashed through the ice to his death or died from exposure, while wandering aimlessly during a storm.

Thousands of Canadians May Lose Livelihood if Legislation is Passed

ALIEN RULING WOULD AFFECT BORDER CITIES

Regulations May Demand Aliens Working in U.S. Reside There

By KEN CLARK,
Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28. — The regulation to compel aliens working in the United States to reside in the United States, which is under consideration at the department of labor, means that the present means of livelihood of between 10,000 and 15,000 residents of Canada is again threatened. It is calculated that if the labor department decides to push the matter which is considered to be the outgrowth of agitation carried on by labor organizations, and the United States government were to support the department, about one-quarter of the population of the border cities of Canada would be adversely affected.

The proposed regulation, it is understood, would require payment of an eight dollar head tax and 10 dollars for a visa on every border crossing. The regulation would apparently revoke general order 86, which was promulgated on April 1, 1927. Under this order Canadians and non-native Canadians who crossed the border daily to work were given the status of immigrants, and under that rating it is understood no further imposition of head tax or charge for visa is admissible.

The Status

The chronology of the status of residents of Canada, who work in the United States follows.

1. Canadians and residents of the dominion, gainfully employed in the United States were permitted to cross daily as visitors;
2. They were permitted to cross as immigrants, being forced to comply with the ordinary requirements for immigrants.

Now it is suggested that they be barred.

The promulgation of order 86 was the cause of extended diplomatic conversations and correspondence between the Canadian and United States governments. The upshot of these negotiations was that opportunity was given residents of the border to qualify as immigrants to the United States and little dislocation on the lives of those affected was reported

Several reasons for the persistence of the agitation against those who live in Canada and work in the United States, were offered here Wednesday It was represented that in Detroit are 6,736 aliens admitted to the United States who have gone back to Canada to establish residence.

Percentage Increased

The percentage of aliens working in Detroit, it was said, has been largely increased by the opening of the new Ambassador bridge, which makes it possible for residents of Canada to reach their work more quickly than residents of the suburbs of Detroit Canadian real estate agents were said to have been active in attempting to persuade workers to establish their homes in Canada, where "taxes are lower and living cheaper."

Americans to the number of 1,536, residents of Detroit, are said to have moved to Canada.

Americans numbering 974 work in Canada and live in the United States, while only 12 aliens who are admitted to the United States live in the United States and work in Canada.

Outside the Detroit sector, where it is estimated ten thousand workers are interested in the new proposal, several thousand residents of the Dominion would be affected should the labor department decide to press and succeed in having the proposal accepted by the United States government. These are at Niagara Falls, Buffalo and some few on the Vermont and Maine border.

Income of $8,000,000
Associated Press

DETROIT, Nov. 28—John L. Zurbick, district director of immigration, said Wednesday that the 6,736 alien residents of Canada who work in Detroit area have an annual income of between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000. The number of commuters has decreased about 9,000 in the past two years because of more stringent regulations, he said.

The only noticeable effect which opening of the new Ambassador bridge to international traffic has had was a shifting from the Detroit-Windsor ferries by commuters who found the bridge more convenient, Mr. Zurbrick said.

No Apprehension Felt
Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 28—The proposal to compel native and non-native Canadians to live in the United States while working in that country does not excite any degree of apprehension here. Those closely in touch with the situation point out that such proposals have been broached several times in the last few years, but the attitude of the United States department of labor has been consistently against any so stringent a regulation.

It was explained here that non-native Canadians can only work in the United States under quota provisions at present and native Canadians are compelled to pay head tax.

Many Cases Heard At Wetaskiwin By District Court

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

WETASKIWIN, Nov. 28. — Commencing on Wednesday of last week, the regular sittings of the district court were held here, before His Honor Judge Lees. Four cases were disposed of, as follows:

Rex vs. Gust Zerb, charged with wanton and furious driving of an automobile on the Calgary and Edmonton trail, a short distance north of Leduc, on September 9. Rosie Yonker, of Leduc, who was riding a bicycle home from school, was run into from behind by the accused. The accused was found guilty, and as this was the first conviction registered against him, His Honor took this into account, and allowed the accused to go on suspended sentence for six months, on entering into a bond for $500. Alexander Knox acted for the accused. W. H. Odell for the crown.

Two small debt cases were: Thomas vs. Vassberg, claim $14.05. Dismissed with costs. R. C. Manley acted for the plaintiff and Alex Knox for the defendant.

City of Wetaskiwin vs. John Logan, an action for damages to a hydrant in Wetaskiwin, caused by a runaway team belonging to the defendant. Judgment was given to the plaintiff for $62.50 and costs. C. H. Russell acted for the plaintiff, and Alex Knox for the defendant.

The large debt case was Oscar Kjos vs. Thorwald Kvello, an action for damages alleged to have been received at a dance held at the Crooked Lake hall on April 12 last. The claim was for $166. Action was dismissed with costs. W. H. Odell appeared for the plaintiff, and Alex Knox for the defendant.

WETASKIWIN, Nov. 28. — Last week the Wetaskiwin lodge B.P.O.E No. 91 had a very successful "Smoker in the Elks hall here. C. D. Enman acted as toast master and Mr. H. Bedford as pianist. Very interesting addresses on "Elkdom" were given by district deputy W. H. Heller of Edmonton lodge No. 10, and district deputy J. D. Saunders of Camrose lodge No. 70.

E. E. Sparks, M.L.A., gave an address on "How and Why Legislation Was Enacted in Parliament," and W. J. Loggie, K.C., explained why the laws were changed and improved from time to time and how these laws were administered by the legal profession. Refreshments were then served and the balance of the evening was spent in community singing and stories by different members

In honor of Miss Helga Edin, a bride-to-be, a delightful shower was held at the home of Mrs. C. Isaacson, of Falun, on Wednesday. A large number of friends assembled, and the guest of honor was the recipient of numerous and beautiful gifts. Miss Edin is very popular among her many friends in the Falun district, and a very enjoyable time was had. A dainty luncheon was served later in the evening.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. P. M Edin, of Falun, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Friday last, when their daughter Helga was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Osmond Hagen, of Edmonton, Rev Ellis, of Edmonton, officiating. To the strains of the Wedding March played by Miss O. Norstrom, the bride entered the living room on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She was attended by her sister, Ellen Edin while Mr. K. Bjorke supported the groom. After the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served to about thirty-five guests. The table was centred with a beautiful wedding cake, which was daintily decorated to match the living room. The happy couple will reside in Edmonton

TOO MUCH SHEIK

The Bulletin's Daily Short Story From Real Life.

BY DOROTHY BARNSLEY

The Cast of Characters in "Too Much Sheik"

JES FULTON, who decides that her husband should spruce up
BERT, the luckless husband.
ROGER WILLIAMS, Mrs. Fulton ideal of a well-dressed man
NANCY, Roger's wife.

Along about the seventh or eighth month after her marriage, Jess began to wonder what was the matter with Bert. It takes a wife that long to get accustomed to her new mode of living before she begins to sit up and take stock of this god-like being she has married.

Bert, she decided, was handsome. Handsome, if you can figure out the contrariness of it, without being attractive. That is to say, he had a good-looking face, and a well-built body and he lacked that very necessary something which, for want of a better word we call "it."

Mind you, this discovery did not make her any less in love with Bert than she was in the glorious premarital days. Jess still thought he was the grandest thing on earth. But she wanted every one else in town to think so too. And, the rub was, they didn't.

Bert was an honest-to-goodness old fashioned husband. The flapper in Jess (she was only 20) desired a sheik.

"I WANT YOU TO BE A SHEIK," JESS SAID FIRMLY.
McINERNEY '29

She wanted her Bert to be so full of sex-appeal that all the women, when they saw her pass by, would sigh, and murmer: "There goes Jess Fulton—luckey little devil—she married that perfectly georgeous Bert Fulton——"

She compared her husband with Roger Williams, who lived in the stucco bungalow next door. Roger had not nearly such a fine-shaped nose and chin as Bert, and Bert towered a whole head above him too.

COMPARISON LEAVES IMPRESSION

Yet when Roger walked down the street, in the morning, with his immaculately tailored suits, and his trousers pressed to a knife like edge; his white gardinia in his buttonhole, and his panama hat tilted at a killing angle over one eye, people turned to take a second look. Nobody glanced twice at Bert.

The whole trouble dawned on Jess, vividly and forcibly, that first evening when Roger and Nancy Williams called. Their visit was informal and, of course, unexpected.

Jess did not mind for herself because she was prettily dressed, and she knew that she looked as well as Nancy. She had heard so many stories about brides who grew slovenly after the honeymoon, and lost their husband's love, that she was guarding carefully against that pitfall.

But Bert—as soon as she saw Nancy's eyes fasten on him, she knew why it was in spite of his blue eyes his handsome looks, he was not attractive.

Bert was careless. He was the one who had grown slovenly. His trousers O, why wouldn't he take them to the tailor's regularly?—were baggy, like balloons. His shirt was open at the neck, and was even soiled. And Jess did beg of him to put on a clean one every morning. His socks, which were particularly loud and offensive had collapsed around his ankles, showing a stretch of not too beautiful leg, and his feet were thrust into old carpet slippers with holes in the toes.

Nancy was taking in every little detail, with a complacent smirk. Jess could have cried, almost. Every bride longs to show off her man. Here was her chance, and Bert looked at his worst Roger made a great effort to entertain them. He got up and crooned songs, like Rudy Vallee. Bert said ""Pretty good, Williams. The only song I know is 'How Dry I Am.' I don't think I had better sing that." And he laughed.

Jess could almost feel Nancy Williams freezing up. She never had been so mortified before. As soon as Roger and Nancy had gone, she made up her mind that she would speak to Bert severly.

It was the first quarrel they had ever had. "Look at your slippers! Look at your pan's! Look at your pants! Look at your socks!" she stormed. And is that the best shirt you could find?"

Bert blinked at her, mildly. "What's the matter with 'em? These slippers feel good I like to wriggle my toes about And I can't stand garters round my legs. And I refuse to make a tailor's dumy out of myself like that conceited snip of a Williams fell

"Oh, Bert!" she said, "don't you see I want to be proud of you? You're as handsome as any man in this town and handsomer, if you'll only snap up. I did so want you to make an impression on Nancy Williams. And you just looked—terrible"

"How did I know they were coming over?" Bert grumbled. "Why didn't they say they were going to call?"

"You should be dressed smartly all the time like—like I am. Don't you know that carelessness is one of the greatest pitfalls of married life?"

"Now, look here, Jess. You don't have to work like I do. You have nothing much else to do but fix yourself up pretty. When I come home I'm tired and I want to relax

"I'm not going to sit around all night in a soup and fish, waiting for stray callers to drop in."

Jess was not going to be put off "The trouble with you," she said, "is that you've been a bachelor too long You've never had anyone to care what you wore, or what you looked like Your clothes are all wrong. It's not only in the evening, but all day as well. You look more like a tramp than a business man. Tomorrow you'll buy some new clothes, and I'm going with you to see that they are right"

Bert's chin stuck out. "I'm not going to be led into shops by the hand like little Lord Fauntleroy. D'you want me to be a laughing stock?"

"I want you to be a sheik," Jess said firmly. "You can be, and you're going to be, whether you like it or not."

Jess had her way, and from that day on Bert was a different man. She selected suits that had class. Nicely tailored double-breasted models that suited his big frame to perfection She made him pay attention to color schemes. She bought ties and socks that toned marvelously with his outfits, and shirts in pastel shades, with John Barrymore collars. And a swagger hat that topped off his strong profile.

The Awful Truth Dawns on the Victim

The result was a knock-out Bert was all that she had hoped for. A husband any girl could be proud of.

Just about that time Jess received a letter from an old school friend Myrna Lee. Myrna was coming to visit her pal. Jess was thrilled to death. She was anxious to see Myrna of course, but that was not the only reason. It was going to be the most exquisite pleasure of her life to show off her handsome husband to her old chum. Myrna, at the ripe old age of 22, was not married, nor even engaged.

"Now, listen, Bert," said Jess, "I praised you up to the skies in my letters. For heaven's sake don't let me down. Remember, you've got to dress for dinner every night, without arguing. And do try to be polite like Roger Williams. And don't smoke that smelly pipe in the house

"Oh, and Myrna likes to play the piano. But don't ask her to play 'Hoy Dry I Am' or 'Sweet Adeline' because she's too refined."

Bert groaned and grumbled, but Jess guessed he would do what she asked

Myrna arrived in the afternoon Bert came in a little later. He was wearing his blue pin-striped suit pressed immaculately; his blue and white striped shirt, and a new tie He looked like a million dollars. Myrna was literally goggle-eyed

Bert bowed politely, just like Roger made a few pleasant remarks, and excused himself, so that he might dress for dinner.

"Oh, Jess!" Myrna cried breathlessly. "You lucky girl! He's simply the last word. Why, he'd knock spots off John Gilbert."

When Bert came down to dinner resplendent in his new tuxedo, Myrna could not keep her eyes off him. Jess's heart swelled with pride. It was thanks to her that he was making this impression If Myrna had seen him with his hair all rumpled, his dirty pipe, his balloon pants, and everything, she would very probably have been disgusted.

After dinner Jess asked Myrna to play the piano while she cleared away "Bert will sing," she said, and hoped he would remember what she had told him about "How Dry I Am."

He did. Myrna played crooning little love songs, and he sang them as Jess had never heard him sing before She watched them, smiling happily Then suddenly she felt the smile freezing on her face, and her hapiness went squash. It was something in his voice as he sang:

"For I'm just a vagabond lover,
In search of a sweetheart it seems,
And I know that some day I'll discover her, the girl of my vagabond dreams——"

It dawned on Jess, sickeningly horribly. Bert was looking at Myrna like he looked at her before they were married. Myrna had fallen for him like a ton of bricks. Bert was singing Rudy Vallee's songs—to her!

Jess was panic-stricken. As Myrna's visit lengthened into days, things grew worse. Myrna made a deliberate play for Bert, and he seemed to like it. Jess asked herself was it for this that I've made a sheik out of my husband?—and wished, wretchedly, that she had left him the way he was.

The climax came one evening when she accidentally overheard them talking Myrna—treacherous little wretch—was saying: "I'm afraid, Bert, that Jess doesn't understand you She is essentially a home girl. A man like you—brilliant and handsome—needs outside interests. You should never be tied down like this to suburban life."

Jess waited eagerly for his answer Waited to hear Bert defend her, and say that she was the only woman in the world who did understand him He didn't say it. He just stood there, looking at Myrna and thinking. His very silence frightened her morning she tackled Myrna

Jess made a decision that night while she was lying sleepless. Ne.

"Myrna," she said, "does our friendship mean anything to you?"

"What a question, Jess!" Myrna laughed. "You are my oldest friend. Of course it means a lot to me."

"Well, then," Jess said, grimly, "it's just about stretched to the breaking point. I think that we could be much better friends—at a distance."

"Why—what do you mean?"

"I mean this—How soon can you get a tarin for home?" Jess said callously. "I'm no fool. I don't want my husband playing Romeo to your Juliet."

Myrna colored up. "Why, Jess, you must be mad to say such things. I was never so insulted—I wouldn't stay in this house another hour."

She didn't either. She was gone long before Bert came home.

"Myrna's mother was taken sick," Jess lied to him glibly. "She was called home."

"Too bad," Bert muttered.

An Understanding And the Real Reason

"Bert," she said sweetly, "don't bother to dress for dinner. Why don't you change into that old suit with the baggy pants? You'll be more comfortable. And here are your slippers and your pipe."

"Suppose the neighbors drop in?"

"Oh, hang the neighbors!"

She settled him down in his easy chair, and remarked carelessly: "I think you were right, Bert about a man wanting to relax when he gets home. And about not wanting to be a tailor's dummy, too. It is rather effeminate. So if you choose to wear ties and shirts that don't match your suits, and hats that don't suit your face, it's O.K. with me. I think this being well-groomed business can be carried too far."

Bert slumped down luxuriously in his chair and ran his fingers through his hair until his curls stood up like the business end of a mop. He riggled his toes out of the holes in his old slippers and stared at them, reflectively. Then he lit his pipe

After a long time he spoke. "Gee Jess! You do understand me don't you?"

She grined back at him. "You just bet your life I do"

But she never told him why Myrna went home. She figured that what he didn't know wouldn't worry him

STORM CLAIMS THIRD VICTIM

Member of Party of Fishermen Lost in North, Dies

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28.—The third member of a group of fishermen, lost in a blizzard on Lake Winnipeg last week which took two lives, died in hospital here late Wednesday. He was Jacob Schlidt, who fought his way through the storm for hours after his two companions, Fred Obach and Mannie Magnusson, had frozen to death, and finally reached shore, terribly frozen and suffering intensely from exposure, Schlidt was brought to Winnipeg Saturday where it was believed his life could be saved if both feet were amputated.

Schlidt failed to gain strength enough to undergo the operation. The three fishermen were returning to shore after setting their nets when they were caught in the blizzard and hopelessly lost. Magnusson and Obach died a few hours later after collapsing onto the ice

"Keed" Chocolate Adds Another Victory to His Long String of Triumphs

KNOCKS OUT EDDIE O'DOWD IN SECOND ROUND OF BOUT

Dusky Cuban Featherweight Battler Has Easy Time in Fight at New York Last Night—Fast Right Brings Kayo

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Kid Chocolate, Cuba's dusky featherweight ace, knocked out Eddie O'Dowd of Columbus, Ohio, in the second round of their ten-round bout at the St. Nicholas Arena last night. Chocolate slammed over a fast right for the knock out after a minute and 37 seconds of fighting in the second frame.

The Cuban had an easy time during the brief duration of the bout. O'Dowd made it a defensive fight and managed to hold off the "Kid's" attack for a round and a half, but his light punches did no damage when they landed on Chocolate.

After a tame first round, in which Chocolate landed a few solid blows, the Kid cut loose in the second frame. He started off by slamming a right to O'Dowd's jaw. Then, after boxing the Ohioan into position, he swung a quick right for the deciding blow.

Chocolate weighed 126½ pounds, O'Dowd 124½.

PHARMACY TEAM BEATEN IN INTER-FACULTY CAGE GAME

Lose to Science No. 1 Team by Score of 18-16 in Contest Staged at Varsity Gym Last Night—Game is Close and Fast all the Way

PLAYING a fast game froim start to finish Science No. 1 team won over the Pharmacy squad in Wednesday's game by a margin of two points, the score standing at 18-16.

The game, the second for both teams in the Interfaculty league, was a neck-and-neck affair from the time the first whistle blew til time was called. Both teams had excellent material and, beyond a certain looseness that crept into the teamwork once or twice, the play was excellent.

STAR PERFORMERS SEE ACTION IN CLASH

Gold, who scored ten of Science's points, was centre on the Camrose Normal hoop team for his year there French, who opposed him at centre, played on the Saskatchewan University senior quintet last term. Killick, playing forward for Pharmacy, also appeared on the floor with the senior team at their last game. Hunter and Hays, of the Engineer's gang are well known for their work on the rugby field.

Play started out keenly, both teams concentrating on their opposition. The first three minutes passed scoreless, then Beach, Science forward, started the scoring for his team. The ball was just nicely back in play again when Gold put it over for another basket. Pharmacy worked hard, French, Killick and Griswold playing some neat combination, with the result that Griswold scored for his team. Austin and Hunter went on for Science, replacing Beach and Batson. Killick, getting the Science basket clear, scored for his team. After the shake-up, Gold slipped the sphere through the Pharmacy basket but it was disallowed and he went off the floor. Pharmacy got hold of the ball now and tried some long shots of French, only to see Gold come back and score on them. Just before the quarter closed, Killick scored again.

Miss Many Shots

During the first part of the second quarter both sides missed some good shots. Steeves, Pharmacy guard, forgot for a moment that he wasn't playing interfaculty rugby and nearly took the ball over for a touch. Play was desperately even, neither side getting the benefit. Gaining possession of the ball near the Pharmacy basket after some keen combination by his team, Gold scored. Almost immediately Griswold scored for the Pharmacy team. The whistle blew with Hayes going down with the ball.

Batson led with a score during the first minute of play in the second half. For a while it looked like Science was getting the best of the game. Killick went through their team though, and scored from beneath the Science basket. Griswold tallied again, putting his team in the lead. After a desperate rally, Gold looped it through for the Engineers.

Batson Gets Winner

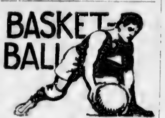
With the score standing twelve all, players on both teams went into the last quarter with blood in their eyes. Gold was the first to tally, on a long shot over the Pharmacy puards. Griswold sustained a slight injury to his eye but was able to preceed with the game, scoring the next goal. French missed the only penalty awarded during the whole game. Austin scored from beneath the Pharmacy hoop, after a mix-up in which French was injured. Science was leading, and with three minutes to go, Griswold apparently evened up the game by scoring from near the centre. Both sides put up a fierce struggle for possession of the sphere. With less than a minute to go Batson scored for his team giving them the winning basket.

H. Hargrave handled the whistle for the game. Overand acted as time-keeper.

Lineups

Science W. Gold 10; Austin 2; Beach 2; Batson 4; Hayes; Hawkins; Briese and Hunter.

Pharmacy: French; Griswold 10; Hodgins; Killick 6; and Steeves.



The managers of all teams who are intending to enter the season's contests of the Alberta Basketball Association have been requested to get their teams entered not later than Monday next with the secretary of the association, O. B. Millar, at the Normal School, Calgary, together with that necessary item of entrance fee. Subsequently, each district will arrange their playing schedules, the winners of each district to be declared not later than March 1, on which date the inter-district playoffs will be arranged.

Through the courtesy of Varsity, the Gradettes and the Independents will be allowed to make tonight's entertainment a doubleheader at that gymnasium, when they will attempt to interest the fans present following a Normal-Varsity girls' game which is scheduled to begin at 7.30 Coach Bill Tait has requested two officials for the second game. Whether this has any connection with the last meeting of these two teams, when the Independents were rapidly overhauling their opponents in the second half only to hear the gong ring with three points lacking, remains to be seen. The Gradettes will still have the services of Doris Neale, of the Commercial Grads, (this being the city league) and the newest addition to the Grads' squad, Miss Kinney, will be seen in the Normal lineup.

No news is available as yet as to the likely Calgary entries in the provincial contests as several of the entries in the various city leagues which have been playing for some weeks past have been watching out for additions to strengthen their lineups. One report is that all divisions in the league will play there except the senior women's and it is hoped with the increased interest in that city in the sport that finances will allow all the playoffs to be held this season. In the Intermediate girls' section, last year's visitors to Edmonton, Chinook Girls, are holding a close scoring position with Major Dingle's organization, the Follies.

The meeting of referees to secure uniform interpretations has been called for Calgary on December 7, Bill Douglas having been elected to represent Edmonton on that occasion. No doubt those in attendance will have plenty of opportunities during the evening to attend and officiate at some of Calgary's Saturday night league games.

At a Defence Force camp the company lined up for inspection parade The commandant passed along the front rank, stopped suddenly before a young man and said: "You remind me of Paul Kruger." "Really, sir?" exclaimed the unit eagerly. "Yes," replied the comandant, "he didn't shave either."

FAST MOUNTS ON HAND FOR RACE SEASON

Many Horses Unloaded at Agua Caliente for Meeting

AGUA CALIENTE, Baja, California Mexico, Nov. 28.—Led by the redoubtable stable of W. R. Coe, multi-millionaire Wyoming and Wall Street sportsman, three carloads of horses have unloaded here to prepare for the race meeting opening December 28.

Vanity, crack three-year-old filly who has the Laurel Handicap to her credit, running the mile and a quarter in 2:03 flat, will be the Coe standard bearer in the Agua Caliente Handicap.

Algernon, a keen contender in last year's Coffroth, will be another to go ostwards in the Agua Caliente 'Cap Algernon reached his true form in New York last summer, turning a mile in 1:38 for the edification of metropolitan fans.

Trainer Benny Creech, the "meteor" from Tia Juana who handled the Coe string with striking results in New York this year, will be here to take charge of the training of this string at the close of the Bowie meeting. He sent Jockeys Joey Inzelone, America's leading rider in 1927, and Alfred Schenk with the horses.

George J. Miller, a regular at Lower California for the past several years, checked in with six from Latonia. In the same car were six others, the property of Bet Baroni, the Reno sportsman. Riff Raff and Crofton are the horses of stake caliber in the Baroni barn.

A third car came from Reno, bearing a divison of the Nevada Stock Farm, trained by R. F. Carman Jr.

California Bear Babes Awarded Their 'Numbers'

BERKELEY, Nov. 28.—Twenty-five members of the University of California's 1929 freshman football team are today wearing "1933" numerals awarded them by action of the executive committee of the Associated Students of the university.

The numerals are awarded to freshman athletes at the close of the season and, in a measure, they correspond in significance to the letter awards made to varsity player .

PROMOTERS IN NEW YORK ARE STILL AT WAR

Humbert Fugazy Now Out Of Fight-Staging Business

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The deal by which the Madison Square Garden Corporation obtains from Humbert J. Fugazy his contracts with Max Schmeling, Phil Scott and Victorio Campolo removes some of the tangles from the heavyweight skein, but there will still be many a headache before the whole business is cleared up to the satisfaction of all.

Incidentally, the transaction probably marks the passing of Fugazy from the promoterial panorama in which he has been a leading figure since he made his bow in 1925 as the guiding genius of the Italian Hospital show.

Loses Fortune

Certain it is that Fugazy has abandoned his attempts to obtain an indoor arena this winter and it is likewise known that Ebbets Field, where he has staged his outdoor shows, will not be available for him next summer. The signor has dropped a fortune in boxing, and, no doubt, is satisfied to say goodby to the game.

The transaction between Madison Square Garden and Fugazy, which finally came to light after several weeks of secret meetings, involves a payment to the signor variously estimated at from $20,000 to $75,000.

The Garden acquires contracts held by Fugazy for four bouts in which Campolo was to figure, and also Gustave Leneve's managerial contract with the Argentenian. The Garden, likewise, takes over Fugazy's contract with Max Schmeling, originally calling for a bout with Paulino Uzcudun, but latter rewritten to include Phil Scott as the German Dempsey's opponent. Scott's contract to box Schmeling also is included.

Count on Campolo

Though Campolo apparently was eliminated from the heavyweight race when outpointed in close fight with Scott last September at Ebbets Field President William F. Carey and General Manager Frank J. Bruen, who engineered the deal for Madison Square Garden, expect to make good use of the South American. Campolo is expected to accept the arrangement if he can shake off Leneve as manager, a consummation the Garden will undertake in his behalf.

Campolo tried to move over to the Garden's side of the fence late last summer, but was restrained by his manager, who hurriedly bound him to Fugazy by signing four blank contracts.

Carey, in commenting on the transaction, declined to go into all the details of the affair, but confirmed the above outline as substantially correct

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 28.—Chet Cooper of the Hollywood A. C. is the new national senior A. A. U. squash handball champion. Cooper won the title at the L. A. A. C. by defeating Bob Achley of the home club, 21-17 21-15. Cooper replaces Les Klawiter as champion, the latter star having been eliminated by Ackley in the quarter-finals.

Brooklyn Promoter Has High Hopes

BROOKLYN, Nov. 28.—Brooklyn will be represented in the National Football League next year according to an announcement by J. P. Fischer, sportsman, who has become financially interested in promoting the Brooklyn Devils.

When interviewed last night at club headquarters, Mr. Fischer said: "There is room for a good football club in Brooklyn. I'd like to see this borough put on the map and through the agency of Brooklyn's own football players. The borough has turned out a large group of college stars, and I know we can turn out a representative team that will rank with the best in the league."

Imperial Oil and Hudson's Bay Quintets Win Commercial League Games

ARE WINNERS WEDNESDAY IN SENIOR GAMES

Blacks Win Intermediate League Clash From Nationals

For three solid hours last night the "Y" gym resounded to the shouts of players and spectators while two senior and one intermediate fixture of the Commercial League were decided.

The "Y" Blues at last met their Waterloo. Imperial Oil took their measure 28 to 22 in a very hectic hard checking struggle. At half time the Blues were ahead 19 to 6 but the winners got their signals working in the second frame and at the same time only allowed three points to their opponents.

The first game went to the Hudson's Bay boys, who outscored Teglers 24 to 22. This was a hectic affair with "Dutch" Lyons and "Tiny" Perring on the Tegler's lineup and lots of beef on the other side too. The Bay were way up at half time 13 to 9 but the Teglers came along nicely after their rest and almost spilled the dope pot.

Hudson's Bay: Ormond 12; Sillars 3; Klingman 0; Meakin 0; Stoddart 2; Kostuk 7; Porter 0; Total 24.

Teglers: Kilgour 0; McLeod 13; Nevicez 4; Lyons 5; Perring 0; Gowda 0; Warshot 0; Total 22.

Referee Grant McConachie.

Second Game

Imperial Oil: Parney 4; Dickson 10; Olsey 6; Williamson 0; Hull 8; Richards 0; Martell 0; Total 28.

"Y" Blues: Schurman 2; Greenlees 6; Munro 0; Glasgow 3; Smith 10; Meakin 0; Turnbull 1; Total 22.

Referee: Dr. Gowda.

Intermediate Game

The intermediate game was full of thrills too with Nationals fighting to keep up in the league standing and "Y" Blacks determined to do some climbing on their own account. It ended with the Blacks out on top with 33 to 25. At half time the "Y" was down 24 to 15 but in the second frame they only allowed the National boys one solitary point. Jimmie Rennie was the bright and particular star of this game, netting 14 points for his side. Garfin and Wiseman, for the Nationals, were excellent in the first half, getting 12 and 10 respectively.

This makes the Blacks and Nationals even with five wins each and three losses. Normal "A" can be counted on to take their game from Normal "B" this week and make the series a three cornered tie. Fred Langdale refereed satisfactorily.

Meeting of Boxing Association To Be Held This Evening

Final arrangements and check ups on the details of the coming tournament will be completed this evening when the Edmonton Amateur Boxing Association will hold a meeting for that purpose, in the Memorial Hall at 8 o'clock.

At the conclusion of the meeting the affairs for the first fist festival will be found to be in excellent shape and the moguls fully expecting to present one of the most interesting of boxing cards. The date of the fights is Tuesday, December 3, at the Memorial Hall and the seat sale will be arranger for fight fans of this city.

The executives of all clubs are asked to be sure and be on hand at the Memorial Hall by 8 o'clock. Entries from all other clubs have also been mentioned but the names of the fighters, their clubs and weights was left over for confirmation.

M'DOUGALLITES ARE DEFEATED IN CLOSE GAME

Capital "A" Team Noses Out Victory in Final Minute of Clash

Last night in the Victoria High School gymnasium the MacDougallites and the Capital A's hooked up in a real thriller in the Intermediate Division of the Edmonton Ladies' Basketball League. By spearing a beautiful basket with but seconds to go, the Capital team nosed out the MacDougallites by a 29 to 28 score.

The teams played a careful close checking game in the first quarter and did not open up very much with the result that the score at the end of that frame was 3-3. However "Red" Reilly and Babe Belanger of the MacDougallites sank some very pretty baskets shortly after the start of the second quarter and put their team in the lead, and only some sensational playing by Elsie Linke and Millie Rankin kept the score down in this period, while Garry Burland, one of their team-mates, rang up a couple of nice counters near the end of this session, and when the whistle blew for the breather the MacDougallites had a fairly comfortable lead of 13 to 8.

In the third quarter Babe Belanger ran wild for a few minutes and all this little star did in this session was to help herself to 11 points. ...lie Rankin, Babs Rowbotham and Bessie Johnston garnered 9 points for the Capitals during this period, and the result was that the MacDougallites had increased their lead and had a seven point advantage going into the final period. However the Capitals tightened up and held their opponents to 2 field baskets, while they sank six goals, the last being rung up but ten seconds before Timer Elsie Bennie blew her whistle for full time.

Babe Belanger as usual played a bang-up game and was the most effective player for her team. Millie Rankin and Elsie Linke turned in wonderful games for the Capitals and their team-mates were not far behind them, as the whole team showed a complete reversal to the form that they have shown in their previous games.

The lineups and scores were as follows:

Capital A—Babs Rowbotham 7; Garry Burland 5; Millie Rankin 10; Elsie Linke 1; Marge Derbyshire, Bessie Jahnston 2; Lilly Erickson 4; Total 29.

MacDougallites—E. Rielly 8; J. Sypnowich 4; Babe Belanger 16; Molly Mickelson, E. Wheatcroft, M. Stiles, L. Johnson; Total 28.

Referee—Bill Douglas.

LOS ANGELES CUE ACE OUT

Charles Jordan Proved Pro At Billiards By the Association

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 28.—Charles E. Jordan of Los Angeles, who qualified for the world's championship three-cushion billiard tournament by defeating John F. Fitzpatrick of Seattle, 150 to 100, in San Francisco a few days ago in the playoff for the Western sectional crown, has been disqualified as an amateur by the National Billiard Association of America, it has just been announced by G. Raymond Collins, president of the national body.

"Jordan, who won the national amateur three-cushion billiard title last year, has been disqualified for competing in the professional three-cushion sectional tournament," Collins' statement said, "and he therefore has forfeited his amateur title."

The next championship match will be between Perry Dickens, runner-up last year, and Max Shimon, who finished third in the 1929 tourney. The challenge match will be played at the Plankinton Arcade in Milwaukee on December 2, 3 and 4 and will be at 150 points.

"Both players are from Milwaukee. Bus Westhus of St. Louis will meet the winner."

Bring on The Ice

EDMONTON fans who have been impatiently awaiting the opening of the puck season here, learned with more than a passing interest that the Senior Amateur Hockey League schedule is to open next Tuesday night, but unless the weatherman does his stuff better than he has been doing it for the past couple of weeks, there may not be a very high-class sheet of ice for the boys to perform on.

However, a slight cold snap between now and the first of the week will give the ice-maker at Varsity Rink plenty of opportunity to turn out a real sheet for the opener and it is hoped that the senior leaguers will not be forced to stall off their opening with the chances in their favor of getting away to an auspicious start on the 1929-30 campaign.

U. of A. Grads Will Play

THE news that Varsity was to be allowed to play graduates on their team during the coming season was easily the most pleasing information given out by Clarence Campbell, extremely capable and efficient secretary of the Edmonton District Hockey Association, in making an announcement on Tuesday night.

The student puckchasing sextet finished far back in the ruck last spring, winning only two or three games all season, and up until the time of this announcement Tuesday, it seemed as though they would not present much of a threat this year. With the inclusion of a number of former Green and Gold Stars in their ranks this year, however, they will be a far harder team to beat than was the case in the winter of 1928-29. Clarence Campbell, Ken Duggan and Larry Cooper are certain to line up with the team representing their alma mater, while there is also a possibility that Nick Melnyk and Gus Runge will be lured back to the fold.

Three City Clubs Strong

THE three city clubs Superiors, Elks, and Imperials, the last named formerly the Maple Leafs, all expect to put stronger teams on the ice this year, and every one of the managers looks forward to the approaching season with a lot of enthusiasm.

With the exception of Jimmy Kinney, the Imperials will be almost intact from the team that won the city title last season. The Superiors have some new material added to the line-up of last season and, while the Elks are said to have a number of newcomers from which to choose their regular squad. Manager George Cristall is keeping the prospects of his "Antlered Herd" pretty much to himself.

Hangs On to Phillips

FRANK Patrick's refusal of an offer of $10,000 for his star right winger, Bill Phillips, sounded rather far fetched when it came over the wires the other day, but there seems to be reasons for it. Seattle, Victoria and Portland have all developed strong clubs this season, and Mr. Patrick apparently has to hold on to all his talent in order to keep his champion Vancouver Lions in the Pacific Coast Hockey League race.

The offer of $10,000 from the Windsor Bulldogs, of the International League, was the third received for Phillips this year. Montreal Canadiens were willing to pay $8,000 for him a couple of weeks ago and the New York Americans offered a cash consideration and a trade for the star wing performer. Phillips is rangy, fast, and knows what the game is all about. The Canadiens and Americans were attracted to him by his great play in the exhibition games they played at the coast last spring.

Three N.H.L. Games Tonight

THREE National Hockey League fixtures are scheduled in Eastern cities this evening. New York Rangers take on the Blackhawks at Chicago, Detroit Cougars play the Maroons in Montreal, and the Ottawa Senators invade Gotham to play the Americans.

The Ranger-Blackhawk struggle in the "Windy City" looks like a close battle, while Maroons and Senators are most likely winners of the other two clashes, according to the dope sheet, as the Cougars and Americans have yet to win a game this year.

RICH STAKE TO BE PRIZE AT CALIENTE

General Manager Crofton Is Enthusiastic Over New Racing Plant

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Nov. 28.—"The future racing centre of America."

In these words, James N. Crofton, general manager of the Agua Caliente Jockey Club, sums up his opinion of the new $2,000,000 race track and clubhouse, successor to the famous Tia Juana oval, situated in Mexico four miles below the United States-Mexico border, and 22 miles from San Diego.

$140,000 Handicap

Crofton wants to see the greatest thoroughbreds in the country lined up at the barrier for the opening of the racing season December 28, when the $140,000 Agua Caliente Handicap, the richest shake in the history of horse racing, is run off. To attain that end, the general manager of the club recently left for the east, to interest wealthy turfmen in entering their horses on the Mexico track.

Crofton took a number of pictures with him to create greater interest in the track. "Ambassadors" of the club have been busy on the eastern tracks during the summer, and Crofton will confer with these at various points on his trip. His tour includes visits to the tracks at Hawthorne Park, Chicago; Jamaica, New York; Laurel, Md., Churchill Downs, Louisville, and Fairmount Park, St. Louis.

The first stop will be Chicago where Crofton will meet Judge George W. Schilling, presiding steward at the Calgary and Winnipeg tracks, and R. F. Carman, well known turf patron. In New York, he will meet Emmett 'Lanny" Leighninger, turf writer and Tommy Gorman, assistant general manager at the Caliente Club. Jack Campbell, racing secretary, will join the party in Maryland.

Miami, New Orleans and Havana will make their bids for patronage of winter racing, and it is Crofton's desire to advance the claim of the Mixican race track before the horsemen have committed themselves to race at other courses.

American Deauville

Millions have been spent on the clubhouse, track, paddocks, hotel, and casino, and racing fans of the west have styled it the "Deauville of America."

The new buildings will be fireproof throughout, of reinforced concrete and steel construction, and embodying the latest developments in race track construction, with a superior ventilating system and every convenience for owners and horses. Spanish architecture is employed in the new structures.

The new plant will be ready to receive horses about November 1, allowing two months for trainers to condition horses shipped out from the east. Present plans call for an 81-day racing season at Agua Caliente.

WHEAT PRICES SCORE GAINS AT WINNIPEG

Values React to Further Bullish Reports of Argentine Crop

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28—Wheat values reacted to further bullish reports of the Argentine wheat crop today by scoring net gains of 1¼ cents to 1½ cents at the close. Warmer weather and rains in the Sou American wheat belt would spread the black rust plague, reports stated. The market was quiet as the Chicago market was closed on the American holiday.

Offerings were on a light scale until the December future reached 137 at which level the selling became more liberal. Close pit observers were of the opinion that the wheat pool was putting out wheat at this price.

Exporters and shippers reported that at least a million and one-half bushels of cash wheat was sold out at this market late yesterda Spreads were unchanged to ½ cent better than the previous close.

Oats advanced from ¼ cent to 1½ cents at one time during the session, while futures values in flax, barley and rye advanced fractionally in sympathy with wheat.

Latest Oil Field Flashes

By Staff Correspondent
Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

CALGARY, Nov. 28.—Herron Petroleums—On Herron structure northwest of Turner Valley, was down 950 feet and drilling in the upper Kootenays, according to reports last night. The Kootenay coal seam was struck at 815 feet and has at present about 1,000,000 feet of gas, officials stated.

Illinois Alberta—No. 2 is drilling steadily, but slowly, in a hard formation at 3683 feet, reports state. The exact formation of the strata in which the bit is working was not known last night.

Merland—No. 1 stopped drilling at 4453 feet in the Dalhousie sands, near the bottom of this formation, reports stated. Last night the crew was preparing to bail out mud preparatory to making a production test for crude oil today.

Mayland—No. 1 bailed out part of the mud yesterday bu tonthing will be known of the flow until tonight, according to officials. The last official depths was 5973 feet down, 532 feet in the lime.

Widney Oils—Directors of Widney Oils Ltd. ratified the proposed dividend policy as announced Wednesday at a meeting held yesterday. The first payment of 5 per cent will be made dating from November 28 and the next probably before the end of the year.

McLeod—No. 1 commenced drilling by the lost bit at 3943 feet and was down four feet past the top of it last night and apparently making steady progress last night. No. 5 resumed drilling after cementing a cave and was down 1700 feet after backing up 1500 feet to straighten the hole.

Okalta—No. 2 was down 4060 feet and drilling steadily with the cable tools, according to reports last night. The home sands are expected at any time, the bit now making steady progress in the lower Kootenays. No. 3 was down 2925 feet and drilling steadily in the lower Dakotas but is delayed somewhat by periodically having to bail out crude oil from the McDougall-Segur sands. No. 1 is slightly under normal at present and officials state that the hole will have to be cleaned out before the normal production can be reached again. The average during the past few days is 250 barrels. No. 5 is cemented with 16-inch casing set at 1600 feet and No 4 is also cemented at 1657 feet, awaiting additional boilers.

Mercury—No. 3, just north of Stirling Pacific, got the Dalhousie sands with good showings of crude oil and gas at 4650 feet yesterday and was preparing to run 8¼-inch casing last night. No. 5, which was spudded in Monday, was down 80 feet and drilling steadily with the large bit. No. 2 was reported in the lower Dakotas at 3975 feet.

A. P. Consolidated—No. 1, west of Home wells, was drilling at 4870 feet with the rotary bit making good progress in the Pokerchips shales above the lime, reports stated. No. 2 was reported down 4480 feet and drilling steadily in the upper Fernies.

Freehold—No. 3 has completed the cellar about 200 feet north-east of No. 2, south of Home wells. The derrick timbers are expected shortly. No. 2 was down 3885 feet and drilling steadily. The bit is believed to have gone through the Home sands into the upper Fernies.

EDMONTON STOCKYARDS, Nov. 28.—(D.L.B.)—Receipts; cattle 304, calves 110.

Considering the quality of the offerings, the bulk of which were on the plain order, the trading on the market Thursday was fairly active. There was a good demand for all classes of good butcher cattle, particularly the handyweight kinds, and buyers were bidding briskly on this class of stock.

Prices on the whole showed a fully steady tone.

Stockers and feeders were in demand and sold at strong prices.

There was no material change in the calf market.

Hog receipts, 1322. Bacons sold at $10, on a fed and watered basis.

Sheep receipts, 356. New prices established.

News From the Mines

Solloway Mills & Co., Ltd.

Big Missouri—Rumors have been prevalent that Consolidated Smelters was pulling out of Big Missouri. Montreal advises that there is no truth in the rumors and that operations are continuing. Vancouver says Smelters prepared for winter's work on property.

Amulet—F. M. Connell, associated with Amulet since its inception, succeeds the late Russell Popham as president. It was stated that "F" orebody would be developed immediately and brought into production if possible by August 30. Results of drill hold No. 250 show high grade copper-Zinc ore and extend the body 50 feet to the west. Amulet's mill is expected to be in operation by March 31st.

Continental Kirkland, which succeeded Continental Mines in the operation of a large property north of Gull Lake in the Kirkland Lake area, has ceased operations. Results to date do not justify further expenditure at present, is the official report.

Moffatt Hall—Values up to 7 and 8 per cent in copper are officially stated to have been secured on Moffatt Hall property in Bourlemaque township, Quebec. The company also secured a group in the new copper area thirty miles west of Chibougamau which it will explore.

Ajax—Last hour break in Ajax was the result of selling on part of individuals who said their advice was to the effect that No. 6 well was another dry hole. They said drilling would likely be stopped at once, but did not know whether a shot would be placed in the hole or not. It is said that there are records of holes that showed no gas giving a good flow after being shot. Ajax 5 was shot but produced no results.

Calmont—No. 2 now removing old casing claimed defective, preparatory to installing new casing bought from different company and now at well. Manager states old casing parted about 300 feet from top after having installed 3940 feet. No. 4 waiting results at No. 2. No. 7 installing rotary drill from No. 6. No. 1 fishing for cable and bit. No. 5 working on casing also claimed by company to have parted.

Southwest Pete—Field report says repairs being made to derrick Wednesday. Official depth 5651 feet or about 173 feet in lime.

Eastcrest—No. 1 has made about 2 feet of new hole after fishing out dropped cone which made progress slow before.

All United States markets remained closed Thursday, November 28, in observance of the American Thanksgiving holiday.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 28.—Flour unchanged. Shipments 38,397. Bran 27.00 to 28.00.

Wheat—No. 1 Northern 1.28⅛ to 1.30⅛; No. 1 red durum 1.07¼ to 1.08¼; December 1.27⅛; May 1.35; July 1.37.

Corn—No 3 yellow 79½ to 82½.

Oats—No. 3 white 42¾ to 43¾.

Flax—No. 1, 3.15½ to 3.20½.

Vancouver Letter

By Jas. Richardson & Sons

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 28—Oil stocks turned upward on the Vancouver stock exchange Wednesday, with a bullish atmosphere replacing the bearishness which has prevailed in recent sessions. The Calmont and A. P. Con. situations continue to overshadow the market, but in the case of A. P. Con. at least, a feeling is developing in the Street that internal matters have been allowed to have too depressing an effect upon the market.

Both A. P. Con. and Calmont began to gain from the start, giving a better tone to the list. Before mid-session word reached Vancouver that Mayland No. 1 was rigged up and ready to bail from a depth of 45,970 feet. This news had a further bullish effect. Mayland closed with a gain for the day of 28 points at $3.05 bid; Calmont gained 12 at $1.15 and A. P. Con. 7 at $1.72.

Calgary and Edmonton Corporation, which would benefit from any production obtained at Mayland, again was active and moved steadily higher, closing with a net gain of '0 points at $3.30 bid. Sterling and Mercury turned over in fairly large volume, gaining 5 and 2 points, respectively, while East Crest, with both its wells in interesting condition in South Turner Valley, closed with a net gain of '4 points at $1.70 bid. Home reflected the generally improved tone of the market with a gain of 25 points at $11.65 bid.

On moderate turnovers the mines displayed a firm tone, though trading generally was light. Big Missouri gained 8 points at 63 cents, and Pend O'Reille and Reeves McDonald each gained 5 points. Elsewhere small gains predominated in the western section. Eastern issues were strong here, Nickel gaining $1 at $30 bid; Noranda up 95 cents at $34.80 bid and Sherritt Gordon closing 15 higher at $3.65.

New York Letter

By Jas. Richardson & Sons

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—With public utilities spending huge sums and the oil industry again on a sound footing, continue to give consideration to Foster Wheeler while in remains in the low fifties. Earnings will be 30 to 40 per cent. higher next year. In the rail list, Bangor and Areo stock showed $9.70 a share in the first ten months, promising in excess of -11 for the full year and an even better year next year, which makes the issue in the 60's decidedly under-priced.

Take advantage of the moderate reaction in Warner Brothers Pictures to buy it and give consideration to the desirability of switching from Fox Film into this issue. The so-called market leaders mentioned yesterday did not advance sufficiently in Wednesday's market to take them out of what is a particularly attractive buying level, while none of the so called yield issues which have been treated here, has advanced sufficiently to make them other than downright bargains. Atlantic Gulf and West Indies nine-month earnings statement shows $9.75 a share earned, all of which promises between $11 and $12 for the year.

Winnipeg Grain Letter

By Jas. Richardson & Sons

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28. — Wheat closed 1¼ to ½ higher as a result of a broader outside interest with concentrated buying for houses with eastern connections, also some scattered buying for seaboard accounts. Offerings were quite liberal, but were well absorbed. Closing prices were at the top for the day. Liverpool again showed relative strength and the advices from the Argentine indicated that weather there was hot and favorable for rust development, with a forecast for general rains. Rains in the north will now interfere with the harvest and delay the movement. Bounes Aires at noon, however, was one lower with no reason given for the decline.

Cash wheat was again in good demand, and this was reflected in early strength in the December option, which later subsided as a result of heavy offerings out by the advance. Export business was given of only moderate proportions.

Weather has turned quite cold in western Canada, yesterday's marketings were 400,000 bushels. Estimates on Argentine shipments are not yet to hand, but these are expected to show some further decrease.

Altogether there was better tone in the market today, and wheat appeared to be going into strong hands. Offerings continue more liberal than has been anticipated, but the technical position continues healthy. It becomes increasingly apparent that foreigners cannot long delay filling their requirements and further advances are anticipated.

Bones Of Youth Found In Ashes

Associated Press

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Ark., Nov. 26.—Bones found in a heap of ashes which authorities sifted in investigating the story of a deaf mute boy have been identified as those of a male person, according to Prosecutor Hugh Williamson, and will be used in the cases against five men accused of torturing and burning alive Connie Franklin, young farm hand.

The deaf boy, whose name has not been divulged, the prosecutor says, was near the place last March where Franklin was slain and his 16-year-old sweetheart attacked. Williamson holds the theory that the crimes were committed in an effort to prevent the marriage of the girl and Franklin who once had been a patient in a state institution for the mentally deficient.

LIBERAL WINS IN NTH. BRUCE

Gives Grits Standing of 12 in Provincial House

Canadian Press

WALKERTON, Ont., Nov. 28.—Fred W. Elliot, Fort Elgin, liberal candidate, was elected Wednesday to represent North Bruce in the Provincial legislature. His election was conceded early Wednesday night with indications that when the total vote was compiled his majority would be in the neighborhood of 500 votes. D. J. Byers, Conservative, Wiarton, was his opponent in the deferred election necessitated by the death of A. P. McWhinney, Liberal candidate, on the eve of the provincial general election, October 30.

North Bruce is traditionally Liberal and returned Mr. McWhinney in 1927 in a three cornered contest in which he secured a majority of 727 over Mr. Byers, Conservative canddiate, and 809 over Colonel Fenton, candidate for the United Farmers of Ontario.

Mr. Elliot's election brings the total of Liberals elected to the Ontario legislature to 12.

With the deferred election out of the way, the party standing in the legislature had been definitely determined as follows:

Conservatives	91
Liberals	12
Progressives	4
Independent Progressives	2
Independent Conservatives	1
U.F.O.	1
Labor	1
Total	112

PRODUCTION OF B.C. ORE HIGH

$70,000,000 Worth Will be Value of Tonnage for Year 1929

Canadian Press

VANCOUVER, Nov. 28—British Columbia mines will produce $70,000,000 worth of ore during the present year, showing greater value and tonnage than 1928, it was estimated by J. D. Galloway, provincial mineralogist, in addressing the annual meeting of the British Columbia division, Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, today.

Mr. Galloway forecast a decline in the production of coal, and suggested that a strong co-operative association of coal operators committed to an active selling campaign, aided by technical research, might prove of value to the industry.

In the last three years there has been rank over-valuation of mine prospects and wildcats, and promotion schemes created largely by the gambling fever of the public, Mr. Galloway said.

"But I assure you that this is only the froth, not the essence of the mining industry of British Columbia, which is progressing steadily regardless of stock prices. An industry with $70,000,000 in annual production with eighteen per cent. of this paid out in dividends, and the bulk of the remainder distributed in the province is a tremendous asset to the people of British Columbia."

PREMIER IS GUEST

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Premier MacDonald will be guest of honor of the United States Society this evening at its annual Thanksgiving dinner. Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state, and Ambassador Dawes also will be present.

half. I should have known, of course that the Indians, perhaps centuries ago, had chosen the best trail, and should have stuck to it. But I wanted to reach the big river before sunset. Well, I did; but not until I had climbed half a dozen ridges.

Arriving at the spot where the four (or two) moose had bedded down for the night, I found the ground covered with about two inches of snow and the remains of a recent camp. The spruce boughs, laid carefully end to end, from the back of the tent to the door, so that the large end of one bough is covered with the leafage of the next, made it almost certain that Indian hunters had camped here. For white men are not so careful in setting up a camp. There were a few sticks of firewood, cut for a sheet-iron stove of moderate size; some pieces of birch bark, and, down on the shore, other pieces of this invaluable medium of the North woods, together with the ashes of a small fire. This indicated that the hunters had patched up their canoe at this point, after a battle with the ice.

It was now about sunset: I had made in nine hours a journey which had taken more than twelve on the earlier occasion. Building a fire, and cutting a few more boughs to use as a blanket, I ate a portion of rabbit roasted over the coals, and went to sleep.

Men's Footprints

In the morning I walked to the head of the slough, and around to the point where I had come into close contact with the young bull moose two weeks before.

During this stroll of perhaps half a mile, I saw no fresh moose-tracks, but two hundred yards beyond, where the young bull came out to the shore, I came upon not only moose tracks, but the footprints of two men. The tracks of the two moose led in opposite directions, and each had been wounded. The footprints of the two men followed the bloody trail of the more severely wounded animal, and judging from the fact that they did not return the hunters had bagegd their quarry, so I set out to track down the other moose.

For more than a mile through level, sandy country covered with a sparse growth of stunted pines that reminded me of my native New Jersey, I followed the crimson trail. Then I came to a bloodsoaked spot where the moose had lain for several hours. This indicated that he was badly hurt; this and the amount of blood lost. For, while there was perhaps half a dozen drops every six feet on the trail, here was a frozen puddle. It seemed to be about three days old; perhaps a week. If I had been hunting with a rifle, I should have followed it up, if only for the purpose of putting the animal out of its misery. Since I had my cross-bow, axe and camera, there were two additional reasons for taking up the trail—photographs and food.

Soon the resting places grew closer together; there were frozen pools of blood every quarter-mile or so. And each one a day fresher than the last, as nearly as I could judge. Moreover, the moose was indulging in one of his propensities—the doubling on his trail. This discovery brought up the questions: Should I follow the trail, now apparently not more than two days old, or cut across to the right and try then snow. But by the time the snow arrived I was back in my jack-pine shelter, now enclosed, with the exception of a door, for the winter.

Started Early

With clear weather assured for one day, at least, I set out an hour after daylight, crossed the river (which had risen six inches and carried the ice with it), and soon struck the Indian trail that leads to the big river to the westward. Bare of snow, the beaten pathway, I found, was similar to my own trail—covered with pine needles, worn deep into the earth, and about a foot wide. Whereas I had progressed at the rate of perhaps two miles an hour, now I made three; there was no snow for my boots to slip and slide upon.

Since conditions underfoot were so favorable, I decided to cut corners from the outlet of the fourth lake to the river, thereby saving a mile and a to head him off or pick up a comparatively fresh set of tracks?

Caution counselled what, in nine cases out of ten, would have been the proper procedure—to follow the trail. But this happened to be the tenth time; the moose, probably lying with its ear to the ground, heard my footsteps crunching in the snow perhaps two hundred yards away, staggered to its feet, and made a bee-line for the river, now covered on each shore with a strip of ice. When I arrived at his recent resting place and saw that he had left only a few moments before, I ran as swiftly as my cumbersome skin clothing would permit to the edge of the stream. More than half-way across was the sorely wounded moose—too far out for a shot with the cross-bow, but still within camera range.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE RIALTO

"Blackmail" the all-British, all-talking feature which is now playing at the Rialto theatre has been pronounced by those who have seen it as one of the finest yet produced.

It is a drama of Scotland Yard, that famous centre of London police circles.

The whole is the story of a girl gone wrong—a girl who thought she knew all about men, but who found out that she did not.

A detective of the "Yard is the object of a former convict's attempts at blackmail. He states that he is in possession of evidence which will prove the girl prepetrator of the murder of, a man.

The whole is worked up to a great climax, one as unusual as it is interesting.

Unusually fine short subjects have been provided by Manager Long, in "Ticklish Business," some of the most popular numbers by Jan Garber and his musicians and a classical musical interpretation of Schubert's immortal "Serenade."

Commencing Saturday Manager Long will present "Flight" the first all-talkie of the air, which is also said to be the greatest aviation picture yet made. A special pre-view under the auspices of the Edmonton and Northern Alberta Aero Club will be given at 11:15 p.m. on Friday.

AT THE EMPRESS

"The Lady Lies," the feature picture which opened a three-day run at the Empress theatre on Wednesday, is a picture which will be long remembered by all whose good fortune it is to sit in on it.

It is a story of a barrister, both successful, prominent and a widower, who falls in love with another woman, much to the consternation of his children and relatives, all of whom think she is on a lower strata of society than he.

Thus commences a fight between true love and the selfish desires of relatives who would intervene and spoil the romance of both the man and woman.

Prominent Broadway stars play the leading roles in the production. Chief among these is Claudette Colbert, pulchritudinous star of many a stage play who gives a performance which will live long in the memory. In addition there is Walter Huston and Charles Ruggles, two prominent players who have been doing fine work in both movies and stage for a long time. Two youthful players, Virginia Deering and Tom Brown, contribute a goodly portion of the fine entertainment.

The shorts are first class. "The Dancing Gob" is a splendid comedy, while Clark and McCullough, two of the leading revue and musical comedy stars, are the leads in another splendid offering.

AT THE PANTAGES

"The Eternal Magdalene," the Gordinier Player's current offering has captured the fancy of Edmonton theatre-goers, and large sized audiences have enthusiastically encored every performance of this satirical drama, in which the "holier-than-thou" attitude of certain members of a small town's population are held up to the contumely that they so richely deserve. The play is not at any time preachy or dull, but it must be admitted that it teaches a lesson—a lesson that will not soon be forgotten by those fortunate co witness the Edmonton presentation at the Pantages.

"The Eternal Magdalene" deals frankly with certain phases of social life existing today, but in such a manner that no offense can be taken. Miss Mento Everitt and other members of the Gordinier Players are all at their best in the vehicle, the result being easily the most pleasurable treat they have yet given their many Edmonton friends.

Thorhild fire sufferers are to receive a substantial share of this week's box office receipts at the Pantages. The drama will be repeated the remaining evenings of this week, with a popular-priced matinee on Saturday afternoon.

AT THE CAPITOL

It is some years since Will Rogers one of the world's most famous humorists appeared in a picture in Edmonton. He was then starring in westerns, with his riding and lariat-throwing added for good measure, and was immensely popular. Now we have, the former Zeigfeld Follies star in his first talking picture, "They Had To See Paris," opening at the Capitol theatre today and continuing for the remainder of the week. Talking pictures were made to order for Will Rogers, for half of his charm is in his slow drawl and his wonderful fund of humor.

"They Had To See Paris" is not only all talking but it has its song numbers as well, with Fifi Dorsay, the live-wire from Paris, singing a number of wonderful selections, in a way that only native born Parisians can attempt. They do not say that when this French beauty left Paris they hung crepe on the big night life cafes. Be that as it amy she is the most fascinating bit of femininity that ever came to the shores of North America. She sings, she dances, she's wonderful, she's chic.

The Capitol's offering deals with the adventures of the Peters family of Oklahoma after it has become immensely rich from an oil gusher. It is Paris, and immediately, for Mrs. Peters, who has visions of consorting with royalty and securing titled consorts for her son and daughter, Pa. Peters, played by Will Rogers, is not in sympathy with marrying his progeny to penniless aristocrats, and he finally wins the argument, but not before he has seen Paris from every angle—and has a lot of adventures with a pretty cabaret entertainer, played by the inimitable Fifi.

In addition to the feature the program includes the Paramount sound news and other entertaining short subjects.

AT THE EMPIRE

Once more Maurice Colbourne brings a splendid London company, his own great charm and the inestimable wit of Bernard Shaw to the playgoers of Edmonton.

Tonight at the Empire theatre the Maurice Colbourne Company will present "Arms And The Man," that comedy of love and romantic adventure which has for its locale the imposing establishment of a Balkan gentleman, whose beautiful daughter gives shelter to one of the enemy in the seclusion of her bedchamber.

The opening scene of the play is merry, not to say slightly indiscreet, for it finds Raina, the lovely heroine, surprised by the enterance from her balcony of a very dishevelled young warrior. And so while her hand is promised to the dashing Sergius, away winning victories for the Balkans, her heart is softened by the plight of the sleepy lad in the Serbian uniform—and to appease his hunger she feeds him clocolate creams.

The swaggering god of war and the mischievous god of love conspire to upset the shrewdest calculations of generals and statesmen, and it is in this brilliant satire on soldiery with its colorful settings and gay repartee, that Shaw passes around some of his most cryptic comments on the fruitility of belligerence between nations.

Theatre-goers of Edmonton are indeed fortunate that this famous Shavian Company includes us in their itinerary which exetnds from coast to coast in Dominion and includes many United States centres. In view of the fact that there will be no return visit, the management urges that patrons secure seats at once.

AT THE PRINCESS

She established herself as the "Empress of 'It' " the first time she appeared in pictures. She established herself as t talking picture actress when she appeared in "The Wild Paryt" and now she establishes herself as one of the world's most versatile actresses in the role of equestrienne and female clown in "Dangerous Curves." She is Clara Bow and her newest all-talking play, a story of the "big top" comes to the Princess theatre today.

In support of Miss Bow in this new picture are Richard Arlen, featured player in "The Man I Love" and other successful films, David Newell, romantic lead in "The Hole in the Wall" and Kay Francis, the suave vamp of "Gentlemen of the Press."

AT THE DREAMLAND

RKO Producing officials have crowded a lot of music into "Syncopation," their film musi-comedy extravaganza now playing at the Dreamland theatre, Fred Waring's internationally famed Pennsylvanians play nine song numbers ranging from Victor Herbert's "Sweet Mystery of Life" to Sammy Stept's latest new song hit, one of five especially written for this show, and entitled "I'll Always Be in Love With You." In addition to these there are in this all-talkie two numbers by the Melody Boys, three songs by Morton Donney, songs by Dorothy Lee and Gania Zielenska, two numbers by a string orchestra, and a piano solo by David Buttolph.

AT THE GEM

Strange undersea people, homes that resemble stalactites, underwater mammals, the world's first submarine, hand-to-hand battles between commoners and monarchists make up "The Mysterious Island," the new attraction at the Gem theatre today.
